DENR Seeks Comments On Waterbody Report

PIERRE — The South Dakota Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) is seeking public comments on the draft Integrated Report. Required under the federal Clean Water Act, this report is used by the state to identify impaired waterbodies in South Dakota. Public comments from the general public and other interested parties and organizations will be accepted through March 1, 2012.

Comments can be emailed to Shannon Minerich at Shannon.Minerich@state.sd.us or by writing: Department of Environment and Natural Resources, Surface Water Quality Program, 523 East Capitol Avenue/Joe Foss Building, Pierre, SD 57501-3181.

A copy of the draft 2012 Integrated Report is available by contacting DENR at the above address, by phone at 1-800-438-3367, or by visiting DENR's website at:

<http://denr.sd.gov/documents/12ir-draft.pdf>.

The draft 2012 Integrated Report contains an assessment of the surface water quality of South Dakota's waters, a description of South Dakota's water quality monitoring programs, pollutants causing impairments of the water bodies, and identification of waters targeted for total maximum daily load development. A total maximum daily load is a determination of the amount of pollution a waterbody can receive and still maintain water quality standards.

"Because this list drives state water quality programs, it is important that people in South Dakota see the draft report and provide us comments before it is finalized and sent to EPA for approval," said DENR Secretary Steve Pirner.

The draft 2012 report lists 154 waterbodies or waterbody segments needing a total maximum daily load. Of those listed, 91 (or 59 percent) are stream and river segments and 63 (or 41 percent) are lakes that periodically exceed water quality standards.

Pollutant reductions to meet total maximum daily loads can be achieved through many different ways, depending on the type and source of pollutants. For example, if the pollutant comes from runoff, DENR can help local sponsors of water quality improvement projects seek cost share funding to help landowners install best management practices that will reduce the pollutant in runoff.

Since the last biennial report in 2010, 69 total maximum daily loads have been completed or determined to be unnecessary, 79 are in progress, and 84 are planned.

Workshop On 'Tools For Success' Feb. 23

Yankton Volunteer Leaders alongside the United Way & Volunteer Services of Greater Yankton invites those interested to attend, "Tools for Success in an Uncertain Economy" on Thursday, Feb. 23, running from 2-5 p.m. at RTEC, 1200 W 21st Street, Yankton.

This year, the workshop theme is something that concerns all non-profits: money. Whether your program is facing state or federal cuts, or just struggling to fundraise in a tough economy, this workshop is for you.

During the first session, attendees will hear from South Dakota Non-Profit Association Executive Director John Grayson. The SDNA is a membership organization working to strengthen our state's nonprofit sector by providing member organizations with the tools they need to carry out their missions. SDNA provides leadership training to member organizations, advocates for the nonprofit sector as a whole, and facilitates networking opportunities.

The second session of the day features Dr. Rich Braunstein, facilitator of the Graduate Certificate in Non-Profit Management at the University of South Dakota. The graduate program is designed to give those interested in Non-Profit Management an opportunity to further develop their skills in administration, fundraising, personnel management, grant writing, and budgeting.

Grayson and Braunstein will be sharing information on the S.D. Non-Profit Association, the USD Graduate Certificate in Non-Profit Management, as well as addressing revenue generation, investment portfolios, and annual campaign management.

At the completion of this workshop, participants will be able to: 1) Review factors impacting the budgets for nonprofits; 2) Analyze management principles for success; 3) Understand methods for continued delivery of quality services to clients; 4) Identify resources for support in an uncertain economy.

For more information or to register for this workshop, please call 605-665-6766 or visit us at www.yanktonunitedway.org. Deadline to register is Feb. 18.
