Over $600,000 in federal funds will be made available to 54 municipalities and counties in South Dakota for airport development, the State Aeronautics Commission said.

There was a good turnout for the breakfast meeting of retailers this morning at Kip's Inn, conducted by Don Carlson, retail chairman of the Yankton Chamber of Commerce.

The public hearing on the proposed business improvement district for downtown Yankton will be reopened at Monday night's city commission meeting.

But the one-room schoolhouse, closed in 1969 as a victim of district consolidation, is still a center of activity, as it has been the home of the Lewis and Clark Winter Wheelers snowmobile club for nearly a decade.

we're facing is how to rebuild the schools, and the subject never even came up in the speech. It was as if you went to the circus and didn't see any elephants or lions.

Legislators also expressed concern about the impact of delayed federal funding decisions for South Dakota.

District 18 Sen. Jean Hunhoff (R-Yankton) said the federal gridlock stands to push the Legislature to its final day on passing a budget.

"If the feds don't settle this by the first part of March, we may not be completed (with a budget) until we come back for Veto Day," she said. "It really depends on what Congress does, so the state knows what (federal officials) are asking for when it comes to sequestration."

District 18 Rep. Mike Stevens (R-Yankton) believes the state should rely on itself as much as possible when it comes to funding, given the federal financial crisis.

"(The federal government is) economically messed up. I would be afraid to count on them for anything," he said. "(The federal debt) is such an enormous problem, most of us can't get our mind around how difficult that situation is. If we rely on them to assist and be partners in programs, I think we're fooling ourselves."

Overall, area legislators saw a number of upbeat things in Daugaard's address.

District 19 Sen. Bill Van Gerpen (R-Tyndall) praised the state's emphasis on long-term planning rather than "knee-jerk" governing. He contrasted South Dakota's "sound" budget compared to the "unhealthy" national budget.

Van Gerpen said he remains hopeful for additional education funding. "I think we need to focus on teacher pay increases," he said.

His home of Bon Homme County includes Mike Duffee State Prison of Springfield, and he applauded Daugaard's focus on the criminal justice initiative.

Van Gerpen noted the sharp rise in the state's prison population, particularly among repeat offenders. "What can we do to help them stay away from committing another crime?" he asked.

When it comes to prison reform, District 16 Rep. Jim Bolin (R-Canton) said he remains receptive to alternative sentencing.

"We do have to change our approach to non-violent offenders. Locking them up is not working," he said. "It seems many in the penitentiary are not very penitent. So I reserve final judgment, but I am in basic agreement with (the governor's) approach."

In another issue, Bolin said he supports the governor's proposal to create a new state park at Blood Run in the Canton area.

"As for the tenor of the governor's speech, it was much better than last year. It was more of an idea of building consensus and working together," Bolin said.

District 17 Rep. Ray Ring (D-Vermillion) also sees promise with penal reform.

"Based on what I know so far, the corrections reform proposals seem to make a lot of sense," he said. "We need to do something about the high levels of incarceration, especially for non-violent offenders. It's important that the changes truly be 'evidence-based.'"

District 21 Rep. Julie Bartling (D-Gregory) said she would like to see more funding for education and health care.

"Even though the governor's budget has 3 percent inflationary increases planned for both K-12 education and Medicaid, the funding falls desperately short of what is needed to meet the expenses being incurred," she said. "In my opinion, stewardship of our children's educational opportunities and caring for our most vulnerable (citizens') medical needs must be among the top priorities of state government."

Bartling said she looks forward to a bipartisan effort at crafting legislation "to heal the wounds left by budgetary cuts over the past few years."

District 19 Rep. Kyle Schoenfish (R-Scotland) saw many positive themes arising from Daugaard's address. He pointed to the proposed criminal justice reforms modeled after other states' success, the possibility of additional funds for education and Medicaid, and addressing the contractor's excise tax for economic
