fell to earth, as I lost sight of it only when it disappeared under the tree line. From where our house sits, it looked like it fell directly west.”

Holst immediately got on Facebook and asked if anyone else had seen it. No one had.

It was pointed out to Holst that the Quadrantid meteor shower was occurring last week, but after looking up pictures, she found they didn't resemble what she saw.

Snoozy said the experience on Thursday led him to keep his eyes to the sky on subsequent nights.

He reported to the Yankton County Sheriff's Office at 8:40 p.m. Friday that he had observed an unknown object in the sky.

“I was looking for other people who could see it to see if I was going nuts or not,” Snoozy stated. “I don't see stuff like that normally. When I started seeing weird things, I began to wonder.”

Sheriff Jim Vlahakis said two of his deputies observed the light and believed it to be a satellite or, more likely, an airplane due to the flashing red light common on all aircraft.

Snoozy said neighbors and other family members also observed lights of various colors they believed to be strange in the sky throughout the weekend.

He decided Sunday to submit a report of his sightings to the Mutual UFO Network, Inc. (MUFON). MUFON is a Greeley, Colo.-based organization dedicated to the study of unexplained flying objects.

“I can see the shape of it (maybe triangle or stealth fighter shape),” Snoozy wrote of what he observed Sunday evening as the report was being written.

Since he can't say for sure what he has been seeing, Snoozy told the Press & Dakotan he will keep looking up at night out of curiosity.

Miss America Contestant To Have Double Mastectomy

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Win or lose Saturday, Miss America contestant Allyn Rose will have conveyed a message about breast cancer prevention using her primary tool as a beauty queen: her body.

The 24-year-old Miss D.C. plans to undergo a double mastectomy after she struts in a bikini and flaunts her roller skating talent. She is removing both breasts as a preventive measure to reduce her chances of developing the disease that killed her mother, grandmother and great aunt.

“My mom would have given up every part of her body to be here for me, to watch me in the pageant,” she said Wednesday between dress rehearsals and preliminary competitions at Planet Hollywood on the Las Vegas Strip. “If there's something that I can do to be proactive, it might hurt my body, it might hurt my physical beauty, but I'm going to be alive.”

If crowned, the University of Maryland, College Park, politics major could become the first Miss America not endowed with the Barbie silhouette associated with beauty queens.

Rose said it was her father who first broached the subject, during her freshman year of college, two years after the death of her mother

“I said, ‘Dad I'm not going to do that. I like the body I have.’ He got serious and said, ‘Well then you're going to end up dead like your mom.’”

She has pondered that conversation for the past three years, during which she has worked as a model and won several pageants, including Miss Maryland USA, Miss Sinergy and the Miss District of Columbia competition, which put her in the running for Saturday's bonanza.

With her angular face, pale blond hair and watchful blue eyes, Rose is unusually reserved. She acknowledged that she comes off as more of an ice queen than a girl next door

“You have to block out everything and I think sometimes that makes me appear a little cold,” she said. “But it's because I had to be my own mentor, I had to be my own best friend.”

She measures her age by the time of her mother, Judy Rose's, first diagnosis, at age 27.

“Right now, I'm three years away,” she said.

Judy had one breast removed in her 20s but waited until she was 47 to remove the other one, which Rose's father had called a ticking time bomb.

“That's when they found she had a stage-three tumor in her breast,” Rose said. “And that's why for me, I'm not going to wait.”

She plans to have reconstructive surgery, but said the procedure has complications and there is no guarantee that she will regain her pageant-approved bust.
