swimwear at the Summit Center."

The class reached its limit of 14, with a waiting list just as long, Bies said.

"It's a great sport. A lot of times, it's one of those sports that looks appealing when you see it on TV or on the river, and you wonder how you take the first step," he said. "With this class, you didn't have to spend hundreds of dollars before you tried the sport. Now that they know what it feels like, people may take that step and hit the (Missouri) river to explore."

Some class members were making their maiden voyage, while other students had already tried the open water.

Wayne Nelson-Stastny of Yankton watched as his 10year-old daughter, Leona, took some practice runs before Saturday's class. The family has kayaked on Lake Yankton, but Nelson-Stastny and his wife, Jantina, got their start kayaking on Puget Sound in the Seattle area.

The family even had a brush with kayaking greatness close to home. Last year, Columbia, Mo., resident Janet Moreland became the first woman to complete the 3,700-mile source-to-sea solo kayak journey. Her trek took her through Yankton. "Janet started at Brower's Spring, Mont., and ended up at the Gulf of Mexico," Nelson-Stastny said. "I helped her portage at Gavins Point Dam. My kids were inspired by it.'

inspiration as kayakers. Jeremy and Ali Wilson of Yankton had kayaked on the Missouri River but still considered themselves novices. They appreciated Saturday's personal instruction about equipment, safety and maneuvering in the water.

"We took this class so we could learn more about kayaking," Ali said. "You're afraid of tipping over, but it's not as nerve-racking as I thought."

Jeremy tried to do the roll-over, where his kayak made a complete flip and brought him back on top. "I couldn't do it, and I just fell out," he said.

So what's the biggest difference between traveling down the river and floating across the pool?

"Here in the pool, you don't have to worry about the tree stumps and sandbars like you do in the river," Jeremy said with a laugh.

In contrast to the preteens in the water, volunteer instructor Helen Harvey admitted she was "50-something" in terms of age. But age is just a number for the Sioux City woman when it comes to her enthusiasm for kayaking.

"I love kayaking. I have been to the Boundary Waters (on the Minnesota-Canada border) and have kayaked a lot of backwater areas," she said. "A kayak can handle anything that ing on open water amidst ice.

Certified instructor Steve Kuhl and his wife, Pia Montoya-Kuhl, of Omaha are experienced kayakers who own a residence at Devil's Nest in northeast Nebraska, On Saturday, they were teaching and encouraging newcomers to the sport.

"The (instructors) here today want to share their knowledge about kayaking. They want to make sure that it's done in a safe and proper way, so (the students) don't get in any trouble," Montoya-Kuhl said.

"This is so wonderful to have this (class) in the pool. Here, people can try kayaking in a safe environment. They can flip over their kayaks and get rescued. They have this sense of security. People who might be afraid of kayaking — here, they aren't getting intimidated."

At the end of Saturday's session, Wenande said she had learned important lessons.

"It's easy, but it doesn't feel natural," she said. "You're supposed to use your waist, to use your core for twisting, and not just your arms and upper body."

She received one more piece of advice. "Don't 'white knuckle' it. Hold your paddle very lightly," she said, giving a demonstration.

For only her first lesson, area as a kayaking haven. "I have been on the Missouri River and on Lewis and Clark Lake, which is beautiful and gives you a lot of opportunity for kayaking," she said. "This is really the only place in the Midwest, near Omaha, that is so good for kayaking." Those words are music to Bies' ears.

"Mostly, we're encouraging people to paddle more. But part of this lesson was also to raise awareness for some competitive events that we have established," he said. "We have the South Dakota Kayak Challenge on May 24 in Yankton. We have 32 signed up so far, and registration only started Jan. 1." The SDCKA's newest event is the "Fort to 'Field 50 Paddle Battle" set for July 19, Bies said. "This 50-mile race goes from Fort Randall (at Pickstown) to Springfield and complements the South Dakota Kayak Challenge, which is downstream for 39 miles," he added.

Then, the Riverboat Days kayak run returns to Yankton in August, he said.

With Saturday's class drawing such great interest, Bies would like to offer another kayaking class this spring or summer, possibly at the Memorial Park pool in Yankton.

"It would be nice to do this as an outdoors event." 'Silly Sibling' Class Set For Jan. 25

Expecting a new sibling in your family? If so, come join the Silly Sibling Class for ages 3-8 on Saturday, Jan. 25, running from 2-2:45 p.m. at the Avera Sacred Heart Hospital Birthing Center.

Silly Sibling class prepares young children for their new brothers and sisters, and teaches them positive sibling skills about the special contributions they can make as big brothers and sisters. Children will learn what new babies do, how to help mom and dad, their role as a big brother or sister and will become familiar with the Women's/Birthing Center. Children will also learn how to safely hold babies and adjust to being a sibling.

The class is free and open to the public. Make reservations by calling 605-668-8221 as space is limited.

Reminder: Seal Your Garbage Cans

All garbage cans used in the City of Yankton are to have tight fitting lids and be no larger than 33 gallons. Sealed plastic garbage bags set out the day of collection can be an acceptable alternative if you have no lid.

Lids or sealed bags are necessary to control rodents, insects, litter and odors.

companies have balked at the idea, or it could mean creating a third-party entity to hold the records.

Feinstein, D-Calif., said many Americans don't understand that threats persist a dozen years after the 9/11 terrorist attacks. "New bombs are being devised. New terrorists are emerging, new groups. Actually, a new level of viciousness. And I think we need to be prepared," Feinstein said.

Rep. Mike Rogers, chairman of the House Intelligence Committee, said Obama had intensified a sense of uncertainty about the country's ability to root out terrorist threats. Obama didn't say who should have control of Americans' data; he directed the attorney general and director of national intelligence to find a solution within 60 days.

"We really did need a decision on Friday, and what we got was lots of uncertainty," Rogers, R-Mich., said. "And just in my conversations over the weekend with intelligence officials, this new level of uncertainty is already having a bit of an impact on our ability to protect Americans by finding terrorists who are trying to reach into the United States."

The lawmakers did praise the president for his defense of the National Security Agency's surveillance programs. "First, I thought it Mother Nature throws at it. With a kayak, you can get away from power boats and hordes of people. You can go places they can't go."

Yankton resident Kevin Kuhl, who assisted Saturday, doesn't limit his kayaking to the summer.
