Martha Pail, a parent also working on coordinating the competition, said the expansion will have a positive impact on Yankton, the YAIA and students alike.

"It'll be good for Yankton," Pajl said. "Hotel rooms, eating out, food, more income into the town and help us grow. It will give our girls exposure to other competitors coming to us versus us traveling to them."

Pail added this weekend will also be an opportunity for younger skaters to watch and put their minds at ease about performing in front of crowds.

"Figure skaters will probably come and watch because sometimes a lot of the younger ones say, 'Oh, I don't want to be out there in front of everybody by myself'," she said.
"Once they see it, it's not really that bad.

Zavadil said next year, skaters from ISI's District 10 will be able to compete in Yankton. This includes the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

She added the ISI endorsement will be a boost to those competing with the YAIA.

"It brings the game up," she said. "It means that the kids competing at an ISI endorsed event in Yankton have to skate on the same level as a kid who would be skating in Denver, Chicago, Dallas or any big city. It assures parents that just because you're in Yankton, your kid is not getting a watered-down figure skating or that their skills aren't comparative to any other kid in any other ISI program."

Pail hopes expanded competition will also bring more interest to the sport in the community.

"Hopefully we'll just get more excitement about it," she said. "Those younger kids will see they can compete and participate right alongside other kids from other areas their Zavadil said the group ultimately wants an expansion of competition to help serve as a teaching tool for the skaters involved.

"The very most important thing to us is that the kids have fun and that they get a sense of accomplishment from what they're learning whether competing or not," she said. "And for the competitors, we teach them sportsmanship and grace under pressure. Competition is good for that. We're trying to give these kids a skill-set while they have some fun.

ON THIS DATE 75 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, January 24, 1939 A bill to protect established business in the state from the competition of itinerant merchants has een introduced by Dakota legislature by Rep. W. F. Ehrenberg of Isabel.

 Although it has been rumored for some time that negotiations were under way, it was just announced today that Ed Keehr, who for many years has conducted a confectionery, soft drink and luncheon establishment at 326 West Third street, the corner of Third and Broadway, has sold his business Mrs. Hazel Kohoutek, wife of Frank Kohoutek, and the business is to go under the new ownership on March

25 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, January 24, 1989 A plan to tack a 3 percent tax onto the gross receipts of Custer State Park concessionaires and those at Lewis and Clark Recreation Area received a setback Mon day in the South Dakota Senate.

Off-sale liquor and wine sales should be allowed on Sunday in South Dakota communities, liquor industry spokesmen told the Senate State Affairs Committee on Monday. The committee agree, approving a bill that would give local governments the option of allowing retail liquor stores to sell wine and attracting and keeping teachers because of low salaries, he said.

Local school boards want to provide students with world-class educations, but they are frustrated because schools don't get enough money to meet high expectations, Pogany said. Rob Monson, director of the School Administrators of South Dakota, said districts have cut about 500 teachers and other staff since the budget cuts, an average of about 3.3 teachers per district. He said he anticipates about a 30-40 percent turnover in superintendents and teachers in the next few

"I believe we're nearing a crisis in education with leadership in our schools and even more so in the classroom," Monson said.

Monson said South Dakota students' scores on national tests have leveled off and he predicted they'll start to drop in the next three or four years unless schools get more money to support teachers and programs.

'I do believe we are, without fixing the problem, going to see our scores go down,' Monson said.

South Dakota law requires per-student spending — a combination of state money and local property taxes to increase each year by the rate of inflation up to a maximum of 3 percent.

State aid was frozen in 2010 and cut in 2011 as part of Daugaard's plan to slash most spending by 10 percent. Because of some changes made by the Legislature, the effective cut to school districts in 2011 was 6.6 percent.

The inflation rate would require a 1.6 percent increase in state aid next year, but Daugaard last month proposed a 3 percent boost, saying it's possible because a one-time state revenue windfall can be used to pay off some state debts early to free up ongoing revenue for next year.

Daugaard's plan would set spending per student from state and local funds at $4,764 next year. School districts want it raised to $4,805, the level in place before the 2011 cuts.

After a school district collects property taxes using a standard statewide levy, it receives enough state aid to bring total spending to the required level per student.

Sen. Billie Sutton, D-Burke, said 66 of the state's 151 school districts have decided to raise property taxes by more than the standard statewide levy.
