'Boyhood,' 'Birdman' Shine At Golden Globes

Plans $420.00.

$241,430.26

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - The 72nd annual Golden Globes Awards spread the love around to everyone except North Korea and Bill Cosby.

The awards season favorite, Richard Linklater's 12-years-inthe-making "Boyhood" won both best director for Linklater and best supporting actress for Patricia Arquette. The sweetly humanist film had a similarly touching effect on one of Hollywood's glitziest evenings. Taking out her written speech, Arquette apologized: "I'm the only nerd with a piece of paper.'

"The bottom line is we're all flawed in this world. No one's perfect," said Linklater.

Perhaps the chief Oscar rival to "Boyhood," Alejandro Gonzalez Inarritu's backstage romp "Birdman," also fared well. It won best actor in a comedy or musical for its lead, Michael Keaton, who plays a former superhero star tinged with his own history, and best screenplay.

Reflecting on his life, Keaton's voice broke up as he thanked his son, whom he called his best friend. "Shoot,' he said. "Two things I swore I wasn't going to do: cry and give air quotes.

Kicking off the show, hosts Tina Fey and Amy Poehler wasted no time in skewering Hollywood's most tender subjects: the hacking of Sony Pictures over "The Interview," the sexual assault allegations against Cosby and television's rise as a cultural rival to movies.

"Je Suis Charlie" reverberated through the ceremony, from signs held aloft on the red carpet by the likes of Helen Mirren to the speeches of Cecil B. DeMille winner George Clooney, who evoked the name of the satirical newspaper Charlie Hebdo that was recently attacked by deadly terrorists. Hollywood Foreign Press Åssociation President Theo Kingma drew a standing ovation for a speech pledging support of free speech "from North Korea to Paris."

Amy Adams surprised in taking best actress in a comedy or musical for her performance in "Big Eyes." "I didn't even reapply lip gloss," said an unprepared Adams.

The first award of the night went to J.K. Simmons for best supporting actor for his performance as a domineering jazz teacher in the acclaimed indie "Whiplash." He thanked his confident co-star, Miles Teller, whom he called: "A young actor of such maturity and brilliance that he inspired me every day to want to scream at him and hit him in the face.'

The DreamWorks sequel "How to Train Your Dragon 2" took best animated film over the favorite, "The Lego Movie." The Russian entry "Leviathan" took best foreign language film.

Amazon, crashing the party like Netflix did before it, celebrated its first - and second Golden Globe for the sexual identity comedy "Transparent," winning best TV series, musical or comedy. The show's star, Jeffery Tambor, landed best actor in the category, dedicating his award to the transgender community.

AMC's adaptation of the Coen brothers' acclaimed 1996 film, "Fargo," came in the leading TV contender with five nominations and promptly won best miniseries or movie, as well as best actor, miniseries or movie, for Billy Bob Thornton.
