MEETINGS

TOASTMASTERS 6217

Jennifer Wubben called Toastmasters Club 6217 to order Jan. 8, 2015, at noon in the KPI Conference Room with a warm welcome and invocation by Muriel Stach. Fran Kocer presented the word of the day, "Cogitation." and tracked its use by the speakers as well as unusual and interesting phrases, like "Get Lean" and "giant Chelsi Hames's evaluation team included timer Mandy Green and "ah" counter Eileen O'Connor.

Speaking for the first time was Jesse Bailey giving his ice breaker speech, which is a kick off to his toastmaster career by giving a speech to tell us a little something about him. He gave us an insight on his love for California, baseball and working with the youth and nonprofit organizations.

Bailey was evaluated by Eric Taylor and he gave him praise for good hand gestures, giving his three points clearly and painted a good picture for all the listeners.

Table Topics Master Sandy Spady asked impromptu questions, using New Year's resolutions as her topic. Taylor isn't going to tame the bulge he's going to enjoy himself because heck everything can kill you these days. Jane Miller admits her marriage has survived so long because she doesn't work out with her spouse. Kocer encourages us to enjoy ourselves a little more, less work more play. Greg Stach's infomercial got us to drink juice with the pulp, in a smoothie put it all in. If Joyce Stevens could learn something new this year she would learn more about photography that way she could really hold to her nickname "Grandma Flash." Hames said the little acts of kindness will go a long way. Green's resolution is to get lean, in the aspect of clutter in her home and office. Stan Sudbeck believes to get out of debt, cut up your credit cards, stock up when items are on sale and eliminate waste.

TOASTMASTERS 1294

The Jan. 10, 2015, meeting was opened by President Vernon Arens. Harry Voelzke led the group in a prayer and a pledge of allegiance. The Toastmaster of the day was John Swensen. Speech was given by Steve Hamilton. Table topics were led by Kevin Buhl.
