'Raise The Dust' Is 2011 Dakota Days Theme

VERMILLION — The University of South Dakota wants students, alumni and the university community to join together, celebrate and "Raise the Dust" for Dakota Days 2011.

"Raise the Dust," this year's theme for South Dakota's annual homecoming event, is pulled straight from USD's "Get Along Coyotes" fight song. The Dakota Days Committee invites students, faculty, staff and the community to be a part of the movement to "Raise the Dust" and get involved in several activities and competitions throughout the week of Dakota Days 2011, which is Oct. 3-8.

More information, including a parade schedule and list of events, will be released on the Dakota Days 2011 web site www.usd.edu/dakotadays or on the Dakota Days Facebook page.

Lyrics and playable mp3 files of all three of USD's fight songs, including "Get Along Coyotes," can be found at http://admissions.usd.edu/about-usd/usd-fight-songs.cfm.

Weather Reporting For Pilots Expands In S.D.

PIERRE — Realizing the importance of current and reliable weather information to aircraft pilots, the South Dakota Aeronautics Commission is expanding an initiative to provide that service.

South Dakota presently has 38 sites that supply up-to-the-minute weather information to pilots. The Aeronautics Commission and the Department of Transportation are assisting that effort by installing systems called "Super AWOS" (Automated Weather Observing Systems) at some small and medium-sized airports.

There are currently 19 Super AWOS systems in place, and 10 more are planned for this year in the communities of Bison, Canton, De Smet, Faulkton, Flandreau, Highmore, Martin, Platte, Sisseton, and Wall.

"Once installation of the additional systems is complete, the state will have very good coverage for weather reporting to pilots," says Aeronautics Commission Chairman Larry Vetterman. "The No. 1 priority for any pilot is safety, and having timely and accurate weather information is critical."

The automated weather observation systems are paid for with aviation user fees.

Johnson Honors Yankton On Its 150th Anniversary

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Tim Johnson (D-SD) recognized the City of Yankton as the 150th year of its founding is celebrated. Johnson entered a statement in the Congressional Record highlighting the occasion.

Johnson

"Yankton continues to be a vibrant community and a great asset to South Dakota," Johnson said. "I am pleased to recognize the achievements of Yankton and to offer my congratulations to the residents of the city on this historic milestone."

Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the 150th anniversary of the founding of one of South Dakota's great cities, Yankton. Located along the Missouri River, Yankton serves as the county seat of Yankton County and is a source of great history.

Yankton, founded in 1861 and incorporated on May 8, 1862, was the original capitol of Dakota Territory. The founders of Yankton derived the city's name from the Sioux expression E-hank-ton-wan, which means "people of the end village." Yankton College, founded in 1881, was the first liberal arts college in Dakota Territory, providing the community with rich opportunities through higher education, continued today through Mount Marty College.

Riverboat Days and the Summer Arts Festival are held every August in Yankton and bring visitors from all over the state to enjoy the scenic beauty and relaxing atmosphere the city has to offer. Yankton is an outdoor enthusiast's dream, offering access to hunting, fishing, golfing, parks, hiking trails, kayaking and canoeing, and other water recreation sports. The Gavins Point Dam makes the city's water recreation possible along with providing hydroelectric power. Yankton is home to the Dakota Territorial museum, which provides a glimpse of the rich history of the Dakota Territory and the events that shaped the Midwest itself. Yankton is also the hometown of perhaps South Dakota's most famous resident, Tom Brokaw, former anchor of the NBC Nightly News, a graduate from Yankton High School.

Yankton is celebrating its sesquicentennial with a variety of artists playing a diverse selection of music. This three day concert event will honor the people that have made Yankton their home, from the first rugged settlers to the children of today.

Yankton continues to be a vibrant community and a great asset to South Dakota. Yankton boasts a thriving economy, various tourist destinations, and tremendous opportunities for outdoor recreation. I am pleased to recognize the achievements of Yankton and to offer my congratulations to the residents of the city on this historic milestone.
