est level since April 2009. Slight declines in foreclosures and bankruptcies in May offset a tiny rise in the unemployment rate.

Nevada had the nation's highest level of stress in May with a score of 19.31. It led the nation in unemployment, foreclosures and bankruptcies. It was followed by California (15.07), Florida (14.11), Michigan (13.47) and Arizona (13.46).

North Dakota was the least stressed — as it has been since the recession began in December 2007 — with a score of 3.67. It was followed by Nebraska (5.15), South Dakota (5.4), Vermont (5.89) and New Hampshire (6.54).

The nation's most-stressed counties with populations of at least 25,000 in May were Imperial County, Calif. (30.95); Yuma County, Ariz. (29.66); Lyon County, Nev. (25.01); Sutter County, Calif. (23.62); and Nye County, Nev. (23.47). The least stressed were Ward County, N.D. (3.34); Burleigh County, N.D. (3.51); Ellis County, Kan. (3.94); Buffalo County, Neb. (3.96); and Cass County, N.D. (4.06).

In May, the biggest increases in the AP's Stress Index were located in counties along the Mississippi River and in the Southeast. Those economies were disrupted by flooding and tornadoes.

Also, counties in the Midwest and South that have a high number of autoworkers saw a jump in stress levels. The March 11 earthquake and tsunami in Japan have led to a temporary parts shortage that has slowed production at many U.S. factories, particularly in the auto industry.

Two years after the recession, the economy is growing too slowly to significantly lower the unemployment rate, which rose to 9.2 percent in June.

Many economists had thought a Social Security tax cut would boost growth this year by as much as 4 percent.

But a spike in fuel prices has erased most of the impact of the tax cut. On Monday motorists paid an average price of $3.68 per gallon — nearly a dollar more than what a gallon cost a year ago.

As a result, consumers are buying fewer appliances and furniture, and spending less money eating out. Consumer spending makes up roughly 70 percent of economic activity.

And businesses are hiring fewer workers. The economy added just 18,000 net jobs in June, the fewest in nine months and the second straight month of anemic job growth.

Sung Won Sohn, an economist at the Martin Smith School of Business at California State University, predicts the economy will expand at a 2.8 percent rate in second half of the year. That's barely enough to keep up with population growth. Most economists say that it takes growth of roughly 5 percent to make a noticeable dent in the unemployment rate.

"All of the problems the U.S. economy is facing, from a housing double-dip to European debt problems, are weighing on our markets," Sohn said. "We really have a number of constraints on growth."

The Stress Index shows that the Western states of Nevada, Arizona and California had the greatest increases in economic stress during the recession, which began in December 2007 and ended in June 2009.

Nevada has led the nation in foreclosures for the past four years. In May, 63 percent of homes there were "underwater" — when the home is worth less than what borrowers owe on the mortgage, based on data compiled by CoreLogic. The state has had the nation's highest unemployment rate for the past year.

Half of all homes in Arizona were underwater in May, while nearly a third of homes in California had negative equity. That far exceeds the nation's average of nearly 23 percent. The two states are right behind Nevada in foreclosure rates. And California had the nation's second-highest unemployment rate in May, at 11.7 percent.

realized that it was not OSHA compliant at this point."

Hoffman said poor weather prevented a full inspection during the original assessment.

"When he first did the bidding, it was cold and icy out so he didn't get a good look at it," she said. "After the weather cleared, we let him go back up on the item, and he noticed those other things."

Project Engineer Vern Arens said the additional needs involve raising the height of the exterior railing from 30 inches to the 42 inches to meet OSHA regulations, as well as caulking the seams of the tower roof. The tower has a special liner on the inside, which other sealing methods like welding would ruin.

Along with the functional repairs, Hoffman said aesthetic improvements will also be made.

"We'll also do a color change, from a robin blue to a hunter/forest green," she said. "We'll also do some new signage — new lettering and things like that."

Hoffman said the improvements have been needed for quite some time, and she hopes the project will also aid one of the town's goals.

"We're trying to get to the water tower now because we're trying to get that registered as a historical item, as well," she said. "So we feel like maintaining it is the right thing to do."

Hoffman said the project, which has an estimated cost of $40,980, should be completed during August, barring any complications from weather.

Life Is A Journey

*Life is a journey of sweetness and sorrow,
 Of yesterday's memories and hopes for tomorrow,
 Of pathways we choose and detours we face
 With patience and humor, courage and grace,
 Of joys that we've shared and of people we've met
 Who have touched us in ways we will never forget.*

Through his life's journey, Bob encountered many who were touched by his work, humor and humble nature, right up to the end. Our family wishes to thank the many who have touched us during this difficult time with your tremendous outpouring of love, friendship, prayers and generosity. It seems such a small gesture for the huge amount of support shown.

It's hard to let go of someone who means so much to so many. But Bob's memory warms our hearts, his legacy makes us beam with pride and there's comfort with the thought that so many truly care. Sincerely, The Bob Karolevitz Family: Phyllis, Jan, Pat and Sam, Jill & Pete
