

Twins Manager Leaves Game Due To Viral Infection
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Twins manager Ron Gardenhire is still fighting a viral infection. Gardenhire left Wednesday's game against Cleveland early to seek another examination from a doctor because he wasn't feeling well. Bench coach Scott Ulger made the pitching changes and addressed the media afterward in Gardenhire's place.

Ulger says the team will have an update on the manager's condition before Thursday's game against Detroit. Gardenhire has been bothered by the illness for the last few weeks. He saw a doctor before Friday's game against Kansas City, skipped Saturday's game to rest and watched Sunday's game from the air-conditioned clubhouse.

Kauai Schools To Play Day Games To Protect Birds

HONOLULU (AP) — High school students on Hawaii's Kauai island will be playing football in the daytime again this fall to make sure their stadium lights don't harm threatened and endangered seabirds.

The Kauai Interscholastic Federation on Wednesday said teams would play night games until the fledging season begins and young seabirds begin leaving their nests to head out to sea on Sept. 15.

Four early evening games will be played when the moon is expected to be bright, and not when fledging activity will be at its peak.

The teams must avoid night games because the stadium lights confuse and distract seabirds following the moon and stars while migrating to the ocean.

Kauai teams follow the schedule to keep the county in compliance with federal laws protecting the endangered and threatened seabirds.
