Nephew Needs Love Not Things

BY DAVE RAMSEY
daveramsey.com

Dear Dave,
My husband and I are adopting my nephew. His mom is involved with drugs and alcohol, and his father isn't in the picture. We've got $1,000 in the bank, and we're in the process of paying off all our debt, except the house. Should we slow down or stop the Baby Steps temporarily, and spend more on family things since my nephew is a teenager?

— Jocelyn

Dear Jocelyn,
Hugs are free. Making cookies costs next to nothing, and spending quality time with a young man or woman doesn't cost a thing. I call that a teenager-friendly environment.

I know your heart is in the right place, but I don't want you to fall into the American trap of thinking he'll be happy if he has a Wii or you take expensive vacations every year. It sounds to me like he's coming straight out of a big mess. He wants and needs someone to put their arms around him, tell him he's a good guy, and teach him how to grow into a strong man.

Doing some affordable family things once in a while is okay, if you can make it work with your budget. But I wouldn't spend a bunch of money to try and prove that you love him. You've already proven that by bringing him into your home and making him part of your family. Continue cleaning up your finances. Then, when you've actually got some money to spend, you all can do some really cool stuff together.

You guys are awesome!

Dave

COLLEGE OR THE HOUSE?

Dear Dave,
My wife and I make about $100,000 a year combined, and we're debt-free. Recently, we got an insurance settlement of $95,000. We have an $89,000 mortgage and a 19-month old baby. Should we use the settlement money to pay off the house, and use the rest to start a college fund for our son?

— Michael

Dear Michael,
Absolutely! Then, if you guys save the equivalent of a house payment until your son is ready for college, he could travel the world while he's studying. If I'm in your shoes, I'd pay the house off tomorrow. In fact, I do it today if there's still time to get to the bank.

Being completely debt-free, and with your income, you guys have the money to do just about anything. You can start the kiddo's college fund, save for retirement, and you'll have the money to build wealth, too.

—Dave

PRE-NUP ... YES OR NO?

Dear Dave,
How do you feel about pre-nuptial agreements?

— Anonymous

Dear Anonymous,
When I first started financial counseling, I told people to never get a pre-nup under any circumstances. Basically, I felt the whole process was like planning your divorce in advance. I still feel that way to a degree, because if money is more important to you than the person you supposedly love, then you don't really love them and you have no business getting married.

I've changed my stance a little bit, though, and now I feel a pre-nup may be in order under one condition: If there are substantial assets in one person's name. By "substantial," I mean $2 million or more. I've counseled several wealthy people, some of whom were heading into a second marriage. It's not that wealthy folks are weird or necessarily greedy, but sometimes they attract weird and greedy people.

In these kinds of cases, I'm okay with a pre-nup. But I still think you should love somebody enough to be willing to take a bullet for them if you're thinking about marrying them.

activities. Only one other archery program exists.

Cull said he believes the designation could be announced for Yankton in the next three to six months.

"I can't think of what is going to make that more likely than this addition that is going to more than double the size of this facility and provide the first indoor 70-meter range in the world," Daugaard said.

On behalf of all South Dakotans, the governor also took the opportunity to welcome the many archers on hand for the event.

"We hope you have a great time with great success," Daugaard said. "I'm also grateful that this is the home of the NFAA. They have an excellent campus here ... and one of the best Olympic field archery fields in the United States. I am also grateful for all the partners that came together to make that possible — the City of Yankton, Yankton County, Yankton Area Progressive Growth, the Archery Trade Association and the fantastic support of the Easton Foundation."

The Easton foundations will be providing up to $1 million toward the expansion project, according to Greg Easton, who serves on the board of the two organizations.

The goal of Easton is to help provide training opportunities around the nation in the hopes of producing an Olympic gold medalist in archery. Easton has provided support for the Yankton archery complex from its infancy stages.

"It's really the partnership between the Easton foundations, the NFAA and Bruce Cull (that has gotten us involved in Yankton)," Easton said. "Yankton is not a big population base, as are some of the places where we are building centers, so it's maybe not ideal from that aspect. But with the partnership Bruce has been able to develop with the City of Yankton, the Yankton Office of Economic Development, Yankton County and the state — that support is important to us. These centers are a lot to build and a lot to operate. To have those partners to keep it operating is really important to us in the long term."

Yankton Area Progressive Growth and XYZ, Inc., have also been partners in the ongoing development of the complex.

During the ceremony, Daugaard took the opportunity to gently rib Easton for not attending the Governor's Pheasant Hunt, despite past invitations from himself and former Gov. Mike Rounds. The governor read a fake extradition request asking Utah's governor to give up Easton so he can attend this year's hunt.

When the two men were asked to participate in an archery shoot-off against each other, the crowd was left with the impression that they probably should stick to using guns for the upcoming hunt. Neither Daugaard nor Easton were able to hit a target lofted up into the air by a machine.

But they weren't alone. Out of 20 attempts by seasoned archers at the event, only one was able to hit a target.

Cull said the current plan is to have the 29,500-square-foot addition enclosed by this winter.

"I think it will significantly change the number of people coming to use the facility, especially during the off months when the weather is bad," he stated.
