USD Names New Dean Of Students

VERMILLION — The University of South Dakota announced today that Kimberly A. Grieve, Ph.D., has been named dean of students. Grieve, who will begin her duties at USD on July 30, most recently served as assistant vice president, dean of students and retention at Lourdes University in Sylvania, Ohio.

"I am looking forward to joining a student centered, liberal arts focused university which provides students with rich academic and student engagement opportunities," Grieve stated. "Preparing students to be productive citizens, leaders and lifelong learners in a global society relies on an excellent liberal arts foundation and student engagement in campus activities allows students to be actively involved in their learning and be challenged on diverse perspectives in a safe, supportive environment."

Grieve joined Lourdes University in 1992 as the Learning Resource Center Coordinator as well as an adjunct faculty in the department of

Grieve

Language and Literature. The following year she began serving as director of Accessibility Services and has held several positions at Lourdes since 1994, including director of Academic Services, director of TRIO programs, assistant vice president for student services, interim and acting vice president for student services, director of Diversity and Multicultural Services, the Title IX compliance officer and Faculty Coordinator for Service Learning. Additionally, Grieve has served on more than a dozen committees during her tenure at Lourdes where she is a graduate adjunct professor and Capstone advisor for the Master of Organizational Leadership program.

"We are very excited to have Kim at the University of South Dakota as we continue to move forward and implement programs that will ensure success for all of our students," said Jeff Baylor, vice president for marketing, enrollment and student services at USD. "Her knowledge and experience in higher education along with her leadership skills make Kim an ideal fit for the university community."

Before Lourdes University, Grieve was an English instructor at Monroe County Community College and presented developmental learning materials workshops and seminars for directors, supervisors, teachers and parents. Additionally, she is very active in her community serving on several boards and is a member of the Association on Higher Education and Disability as well as the Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education. Grieve received a Ph.D. in leadership in higher education and master's degree in education from the University of Toledo and a Bachelor of Arts degree in education from Michigan State University.

Students Examine Career Opportunities In Health Care At USD Camp

VERMILLION — Nearly 50 high school students from across South Dakota and from nearby areas of Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota received an up close look at careers in health care professions during the sixth annual Health-care Careers Camp, June 17-22, at the University of South Dakota.

With the help of various presenters, tours and activities, students learned what it takes to pursue a future in health care. Health care professionals were in attendance to inform camp participants of career options and to discuss important issues such as salaries, educational requirements and the need to augment the future health care workforce — in all disciplines — in order to accommodate projected health care demands. The term "Baby Boom Generation" also became a familiar phrase to the campers during the week.

According to Jerry Yutzenka, Ph.D., director of Diversity Affairs for the Sanford School of Medicine and a pre-medicine adviser for the University, the camp was created to allow high school students the opportunity to observe, ask questions and interact with professionals from a variety of health care areas. Throughout the week, campers attended group activities and discussions; presentations by faculty and health care professionals from USD, the Sanford School of Medicine, the USD School of Health Sciences and the Sanford Vermillion Medical Center; and participated in field trips to area medical facilities. This year, students also had the opportunity to receive training and certification in both the Heartsavers CPR/AED and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act.

Students attending the 2012 camp included Jenae Schneider of Big Stone City, Traci Lenz of Brandon, Emma McCarty, Brookings, Katlyn Hurlburt, Carroll, Neb., Hanna Ramstad, Colton, Amber Landsman, Elkton, Rachel Deurmier of Eureka, Trevor Kampshoiff of Fulton, Rachel Flaugh of Hartington, Neb., Melissa Smith of Hazel, Shane Hansen and Angela Merrill of Hot Springs, Halle LaRoche of Lower Brule, Shayla

Inspection Scores For Businesses Available Online

PIERRE — Consumers can find health inspection scores for nearly 6,000 food service, lodging and campground establishments on a new state website. The site is one component of a larger effort to computerize and streamline the entire inspection and licensing system.

"We needed an electronic system that would let inspectors enter real-time inspection reports, vendors submit license applications and fees, and the public to more easily access health scores so creating it was no easy task," said Doneen Hollingsworth, Secretary of the Department of Health. "This will be a vast improvement over the antiquated paper-based system we've been using and should streamline the process for vendors and inspectors alike."

The department licenses food service, lodging, and campground establishments to assure health and safety standards are met and the public health protected. Routine, regular inspections monitor food handling practices, sanitation, fire safety and environmental issues.

One of the first components of the new electronic system to be operational is the health score website. At the same time, inspectors are being trained to use the electronic inspection report component. The online license application, renewal and payment portion of the system is expected to be operational this fall.

Inspection reports are public records under state statute and are already available from the department upon request, but putting that information online makes it even more accessible. Increased accessibility and transparency of public records is an emphasis of Gov. Daugaard's Better Government Initiative.

At the website, consumers can search by name, location, or facility type to find the four latest inspection scores for each licensed establishment as well as information about whether violations were critical or non-critical. In 2013, the site will be expanded to include full inspection reports along with the scores.

"We would encourage consumers to remember that a single inspection is just a snapshot of an establishment's operation on a particular day," said Hollingsworth. "For a more complete picture of an establishment's operation, it's important to look at scores over time and also to consider whether violations were critical or non-critical."

To access the site, click the health scores link at doh.sd.gov.

USD To Offer Medical Biology Bachelor's Degree

VERMILLION — The South Dakota Board of Regents has approved a bachelor's degree in medical biology that will be offered to students enrolling at the University of South Dakota beginning this fall.

According to Matthew Moen, Ph.D., dean of the College of Arts & Sciences at USD, the B.S. in medical biology is a stepping stone for students hoping to attend medical school or a graduate program in health sciences.

"Medical biology is a logical major for students wishing to attend the Sanford School of Medicine," said Moen, "and its addition only strengthens USD's regional reputation as a center of learning and discovery in the life sciences and medicine."

The new medical biology degree is designed to prepare USD students for admission into medical school and other health care professional programs, including dentistry, physician assistant, physical therapy and podiatry. The program's curriculum will also reflect the latest national trends in medical education and is a collaborative effort between the Sanford School of Medicine and USD's College of Arts & Sciences.

"It is exciting to have faculty from the College of Arts & Sciences and the School of Medicine working together to offer this opportunity to students interested in obtaining the best preparation for careers in the medical profession," added Ron Lindahl, Ph.D.,

executive dean of the Sanford School of Medicine.
