We Weren’t Able To Raise Cain

BY PASTOR RANDY TRAMP
Children’s Pastor, Assembly of God Church

If Adam and Eve wrote a book it may have been titled, “We weren’t Able to raise Cain.” It would be a sad story of murder and the anguish of parenthood. Adam and Eve were optimistic when their first child was born. That optimism turned to disappointment one fateful day.

On that day Cain heard God say: “If you do well, will you not have honor? Moreover, if you do wrong, sin is waiting at the door, desiring to have you, but do not let it be your master. Cain chose dishonor and the title of fugitive. We don’t know how long Cain lived but I suspect it wasn’t a long life. It certainly wasn’t a fruitful life.

I remind my children about Ephesians 6 - Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right. Honor your father and mother - which is the first commandment with a promise - that it may go well with you and that you may enjoy long life on the earth. A 102-year-old woman was asked this question: “What attributed to your long life?” She answered by saying, “I honored my father and mother.”

I suspect not too many children are reading this article so I will go to the next part of Ephesians 6 - And, you fathers do not make your children angry; but give them training in the teaching and fear of the Lord. I’m not suggesting that Adam and Eve didn’t try to train Cain in the teaching and fear of the Lord. We simply don’t know what the first family’s home was like. We can’t make judgment calls simply on how a child acts. We do know that Cain did not honor God. Cain did not listen to God.

Another translation of Ephesians 6 is, “Don’t stir up anger in your children.” Emotional training begins in infancy. When a baby has her /his needs met, emotional training is on the right path. As a child grows, those needs change. Children left to their own way can become angry because needs aren’t being met. A child needs love and security. Discipline without love will produce rebellion instead of security. Children come into this world needing connection. You are encouraged to find out what those needs are and then connect to your child. Some children are easy to connect to, while others are more difficult. One child may connect with conversation and another may simply need you to listen. While yet another child may need a hug. Each created child is different. It’s up to the parent to discover how best to connect to your child and thus meet their needs.

Islam Muslims Hold Fast To Rules Of Ramadan

BY HELEN T. GRAY
© 2012 McClatchy Newspapers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Although a devout Muslim, Ruby Sous hasn’t fasted during Ramadan in two years.

Though a grave sin not to fast, allowances are made, and the Kansas City woman has fallen under two categories of exemptions: Two years ago she was pregnant; last year she was nursing.

While exceptions to one of the five pillars of Islam do exist, that does not mean nothing is expected of the devout.

To compensate, Sous sent meals to a shelter for the homeless for each of her non-fasting days. She also made up the time later in the year when the days were shorter.

This year, Sous is still nursing but said she wants “to push myself to fast.”

Ramadan, the ninth month of the Islamic calendar — which is lunar — drifts through the seasons. This year it began at sunset July 19.

During the month, all able-bodied Muslims after reaching puberty are required to abstain from food, drink (including water) and sexual relations from dawn to sunset.

“You are to restrain yourself from any pleasures,” Islamic scholar Mohamed Hilali said. He is director of the Islamic Center in Wichita, Kan., after working nine years at the Islamic School in Kansas City, Mo.

“The time should be spent on purifying your soul and spending more time reading and studying the Qur’an,” he said.

There are a few exceptions to fasting, but 16 hours of daytime heat is not one of them. Remember, the religion was born in the desert nation of Saudi Arabia.

With no end to the 100-plus-degree weather in sight, Samuel Shareef of Kansas City, who owns a courier business and is in and out of the heat constantly, plans to fast. “It will be very difficult,” but he intends to drink as much water as he can during his meal before dawn and then after sunset.

“Last year there were a couple of 100-degree days, and I pulled over and took a short nap. It is extremely tough, but the younger guys may have an easier time,” the 62-year-old said.

“If you break the fast, it is because your mind tells you that you can’t (succeed),” Shareef said.

The discomforts of hunger and thirst are to be expected.

Hilali said fasting is in obedience to God and done out of love for God. The intention, however, is not to hurt oneself.

“If you go as far as you can and can’t take it anymore, then stop it,” he said. “You may go to work and intend to fast, but if you feel harm is imminent, you stop fasting. Then you make it up later. You know how much you can tolerate.”

Admad Gheshah of Raytown, Mo., isn’t fasting because he went on dialysis in 2002 and received a kidney in 2005. He is required to drink a certain amount of water and has to eat something to take some of his medication.

Hilali said sickness is not a personal judgment. One has to go to an Islamic scholar or doctor, an expert, to ask for an exemption to fasting.

In 2006, Gheshah managed to fast because the period fell during the fall when the days were shorter. In lieu of fasting this year, he will donate to a shelter an amount for a month’s worth of food.

He still doesn’t think he has it as bad as two brothers, one who has a doughnut shop, the other, a restaurant. “So any time of the year, they have a challenge.”

Among other exceptions to fasting during Ramadan, according to Hilali, are:

The feeble elderly, but they must offer at least one needy person an average full meal or its value per day.

Persons that a doctor deems to be too ill. They are expected to fast once their conditions improve. For the chronically ill, they are to feed the poor.

Those traveling for business, involved in warfare or an industry vital to the nation. They are to make up for the days missed.

Women who are menstruating, who also can make up the days later.

Prisoners doing hard labor. They don’t have to make it up.

The mentally ill and others unaccountable for their actions.

Hilali said fasting has important virtues, and exemptions are not considered lightly.

“The greatest virtue is to obtain piety with and consciousness of God,” he said.
