Bombing

choose to pursue it.

The proceedings took place in a heavily guarded courtroom packed not only with victims but with their families, police officers, and members of the public and the media.

The Russian immigrant and former college student looked much as he did in a photo widely circulated after his arrest, his hair curly and unkempt. Wearing an orange prison jumpsuit, he appeared nonchalant, almost bored, during the hearing. The cast covered his left forearm, hand and fingers.

The bombing victims showed little reaction in the courtroom after a federal marshal warned them against any outbursts.

Liz Norden, the mother of two men who lost their right legs in the bombings, said afterward: "I actually felt sick to my stomach."

MIT Police Chief John DiFava, who was also in the courtroom, said Tsarnaev looked "smug."

"I didn't see a lot of remorse. I didn't see a lot of regret," he said. "It just seemed to me that if I was in that position, I would have been a lot more nervous, certainly scared."

DiFava added: "I just wanted to see him. I wanted to see the person that so coldly and callously killed four people, one of whom being an officer of mine."

Authorities say Tsarnaev orchestrated the bombing along with his older brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, who died following a gun battle with police three days after the attack. Dzhokhar Tsarnaev was arrested on April 19, hiding in a bloodstained boat in a suburban backyard after a manhunt that paralyzed much of the Boston area.

Tsarnaev is also charged in the killing of a Massachusetts Institute of Technology police officer and the carjacking of a motorist during their getaway attempt.

His two sisters were in court in Muslim garb. One was carrying a baby; the other wiped away tears with a tissue. Tsarnaev's parents remained back in Russia.

Tsarnaev's lawyer Judy Clarke, an expert in death penalty cases, asked that the judge enter not-guilty pleas for him, but U.S. Magistrate Judge Marianne Bowler said: "I would ask him to answer."

On the same day as the arraignment, Boston's police commissioner appeared on Capitol Hill and complained to a Senate panel that the Justice Department failed to share information on terrorism threats with local officials before the bombing.

"There is a gap with information sharing at a higher level while there are still opportunities to intervene in the planning of these terrorist events," Commissioner Edward F. Davis III said.

Reporters and spectators began lining up for seats in the courtroom at 7:30 a.m. as a dozen Federal Protective Service officers and bomb-sniffing dogs surrounded the courthouse. Four hours before the 3:30 p.m. hearing, the defendant arrived at the courthouse in a four-vehicle motorcade.

About a dozen Tsarnaev supporters cheered as the motorcade arrived. The demonstrators yelled, "Justice for Jahar!" as Tsarnaev is known. One woman held a sign that said, "Free Jahar."

Lacey Buckley said she traveled from her home in Wenatchee, Wash., to attend the arraignment. She said she believes he is innocent. "I just think so many of his rights were violated. They almost murdered an unarmed kid in a boat," she said.

A group of friends who were on the high school wrestling team with Tsarnaev at Cambridge Rindge and Latin waited in line for hours, hoping to get a seat.

One of them, Hank Alvarez, said Tsarnaev was calm, peaceful and apolitical in high school.

"Just knowing him, it's hard for me to face the fact that he did it," said Alvarez, 19, of Cambridge.

Prosecutors say Tsarnaev, a Muslim, wrote about his motivations for the bombing on the inside walls and beams of the boat. He scrawled that the U.S. government was "killing our innocent civilians," and also wrote: "We Muslims are one body, you hurt one you hurt us all."

Martin Richard, 8, Krystle Marie Campbell, 29, and Lingzi Lu, 23, were killed by the two bombs, which were fashioned out of pressure cookers, gunpowder, nails and other shrapnel. Numerous victims lost legs.

POUND COUNT

Several animals are available at the Yankton Animal Shelter. For more information call the Yankton Police Department's Animal Control Office, from 8 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Friday at 661-9494, or 668-5210.

DAILY RECORD POLICY

The Press & Dakotan publishes police and sheriff reports as a public service to its readers. It is important to remember that an arrest should not imply guilt and that every person is presumed innocent until proven otherwise. When juveniles are released from jail, it is into the care of a parent or guardian. It is the policy of the Press & Dakotan to publish all names made available in the police and court reports. There are no exceptions.

Grazing Management Will Impact Drought Recovery

BROOKINGS — Even with the spring moisture, soil moisture reserves remain limited on range and pastureland of western South Dakota said Roger Gates, SDSU Extension Rangeland Management Specialist.

"Spring moisture improved attitudes and potential pasture production in many areas. While the relief is welcome, soil moisture reserves remain limited and cool April and May temperatures suggest that total growing season production will remain below average," Gates said, adding that the current Drought Monitor identifies continuing drought in most of western South Dakota.

However, he said if favorable moisture continues, recovery from the drought of 2012 may move forward in some areas. Gates said that range management decisions made this growing season will impact this recovery.

"Short hay supplies have forced many producers to turn out on pastures that were already short and growing slowly. Keeping track of the recovery process could provide valuable guidance about ongoing grazing management decisions," he said.

A good way to keep track of the recovery process is to begin keeping production records on pastureland.

"Livestock producers generally appreciate the value of production records. Knowing which cows are most fertile, productive and therefore profitable, can inform decisions about culling and perhaps replacements for the breeding herd," Gates said. "Production records for pastures can provide valuable guidance in planning and implementing grazing decisions."

He said the challenge in evaluating pasture production status is that landscape change is generally very slow.

"It can be nearly imperceptible to even the most careful observer," Gates said. "Knowing that grasslands are recovering or moving to a more productive condition requires a commitment to careful and repeated observation."

Fortunately, Gates said most of those observations are easily made. The challenge is to record these observations in a way that changes to the landscape can be clearly identified over a longer period of time.

Thank You

We would like to express our deepest appreciation to all our relatives and friends who helped us celebrate our anniversary. We thank you for attending the open house, for the gifts, the many beautiful cards, the many good wishes, hugs and phone calls.

Most of all we want to thank our children, their spouses and families for the fabulous job they did hosting our anniversary open house. Thank you for not listening to us when we said we didn't want big party!

We are so grateful for the opportunity to have celebrated with relatives and friends (some friends we had not seen for many years). We love you all. Thank you again for making June 15th a most memorable day. God loves you.

Celebration For CamTu Tran Slated

King Dragon Restaurant in Yankton will be closed from 6:30-8:30 p.m. tonight (Thursday) for a potluck dinner in celebration of the life of CamTu Tran, who passed away on April 3, 2013. The public is invited to this event.

If you can bring something to this potluck event, it would be appreciated.

Burbank Native Set For TV Competition

Burbank native Douglas Roegiers will be one of six singers competing for a $1 million prize on tonight's (Thursday) premiere broadcast of "The Winner Is" at 8 p.m. on KDLT TV.

Roegiers' style channels back to the days of the Big Band Swing era and his loyal fans know him as "The Crooner." He also performs with a 9-piece swing band Phat Cat Swinger.

"The Winner Is" mixes a singing competition with the strategy of a game show. Hosted by Nick Lachey, each episode features six acts that go head-to-head. Contestants must bet on their own performance, win over 101 jurors, and avoid cash temptations to move forward.

Douglas is the son of Chuck & Rosie Roegiers of Burbank. He currently lives in North Hollywood, Calif.

KDLT-TV can be viewed on channel 5 for most cable subscribers, channel 46 for satellite subscribers, and channel 5.1 or 46.1 for over-the-air antenna viewers.
