Sierra Club Presenting Film Tuesday

VERMILLION — The film "Living Downstream" will be screened at the Vermillion Public Library, 18 Church St., at 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 16, as part of the 2013 Eco Film Series.

This film follows Sandra Steingraber during one pivotal year as she travels across North America, working to break the silence about cancer and its environmental links. After a routine cancer screening, Steingraber receives some worrying results. We begin two journeys with Steingraber: her private struggles with cancer and her public quest to bring attention to the urgent human rights issue of cancer prevention. We follow these invisible toxins as they migrate to some of the most beautiful places in North America. We see how these chemicals enter our bodies and how, once inside, scientists believe they may be working to cause cancer. The film's running time is 60 minutes.

This event is sponsored by the Living River Group, Sierra Club. For more information, contact Maggie Pettersen at (605) 624-4775 or norsky220874@yahoo.com/.

right in accordance with the law but maybe the law is wrong, maybe society is wrong; there's a lot that needs fixing."

At a youth service in Sanford, Fla., where the trial was held, teens wearing shirts displaying Martin's picture wiped away tears during a sermon at the St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church.

Hours after the verdict, demonstrators gathered on U Street in Washington, D.C., chanting, "No justice, no peace." One protester carried a sign that read, "Stop criminalizing black men."

In Florida, about 200 demonstrators marched through downtown Tallahassee carrying signs that said "Racism is Not Dead" and "Who's Next?"

In Chicago, black clergy members called for calm, with the Rev. Ira Acree of Greater St. John Bible Church saying the community should become "a united voice for peace" because it can't control the verdict but it "can control our streets and communities."

About 200 people turned out for a rally and march in downtown Chicago, saying the verdict was symbolic of lingering racism in the United States.

Seventy-three-year-old Maya Miller said the case reminded her of the 1955 slaying of Emmitt Till, a 14-year-old from Chicago who was murdered by a group of white men while visiting Mississippi. Till's killing galvanized the civil gram takes state government to the people. The governor, cabinet members and other state officials hit the road to meet with area citizens.

The program is designed to make state government more accessible for citizens. Area residents can meet with the governor and other state officials, and they can do so without needing to take the time and expense of traveling to Pierre.

The upcoming "Capital For A Day" will also allow Viborg officials and other residents to showcase their community and to stress local accomplishments and concerns.

While located in Viborg, the upcoming "Capital For A Day" is open to the general public and not only for Viborg residents.

The "Capital For A Day" event culminates a busy time for Viborg, which celebrates its annual Danish Days celebration July 19-21. Viborg, named after a Danish community, serves as an appropriate setting for Daugaard, who comes from Danish ancestry.

rights movement.

Miller said she felt as if "nothing has changed in 58 years."

The NAACP called for the opening of a civil rights case against Zimmerman in an on-line petition addressed to Attorney General Eric Holder.

Civil rights leaders, including the Revs. Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton, urged peace in the wake of the verdict. Jackson said the legal system "failed justice," but violence isn't the answer.

But not all the protesters heeded those calls.

In Oakland, Calif., some angry demonstrators broke windows, burned U.S. flags and started street fires. Some marchers also vandalized a police squad car and used spray paint to scrawl anti-police graffiti on roads and Alameda County's Davidson courthouse. In Los Angeles, police said a crowd of about 100 protesters surrounded an officer and two people threw bottles when more police arrived. The officers used bean-bag rounds to disperse the crowd.

Most protests were peaceful, however.

In Manhattan's Union Square, hundreds of people gathered to voice their passions over the verdict, hoisting placards with images of Martin.

Some tempered their anger, saying they didn't contest the jury's decision based on the legal issues involved.

But "while the verdict may be legal, a system that doesn't take into account what happened is a broken legal system," said Jennifer Lue, 24, an Asian-American resident of Harlem.

"Everyone should feel about this, whether you're Asian-American or African-American," she said.
