Westside Waterworks

KELLY HERTZ/P&D

Keep Yankton Beautiful (KYB) and the City of Yankton have worked together to install a fountain in the pond at Westside Park. KYB raised $5,000 to cover its share of the project, which adds a new aesthetic quality to the park at all hours. The fountain is also illuminated by four lights during the nighttime hours (right). Besides providing a new artistic touch to the park area, the fountain should also assist in circulating the pond's water, which may help break down decaying vegetation, deter mosquito growth, and prevent surface and bottom growth.

KYB, City Partner To Create New Pond Feature

BY NATHAN JOHNSON

Thanks to a partnership between the City of Yankton and Keep Yankton Beautiful (KYB), a fountain now shoots water above the pond in Westside Park.

The feature was installed Tuesday. "I think it looks awesome, and I'm so excited about it," said Amanda Johnson, director of the nonprofit Keep Yankton Beautiful. The organization aims to improve the community environment through litter prevention, recycling, waste reduction and beautification projects.

Through various sponsors, KYB was able to raise $5,000 toward the project, a goal that was reached early this year.

The city installed the fountain and covered the remaining several thousand dollars in costs related to the purchase of the structure.

"We appreciate all the sponsors who contributed to it," Johnson said. "I've heard a lot of feedback about what a nice addition it is to the park."

The fountain has two streams, one that shoots up approximately five feet in the air and another that goes about 18 feet.

"It also has four lights around it, so it's lit up very well," said Todd Larson, Yankton's

SD Groups Gear Up To Push Exchange

Organizations Prepare For Online Exchange Slated To Be Available Oct. 1

BY CHET BROKAW

PIERRE — South Dakotans who need health insurance can start enrolling Oct. 1 through a new online marketplace, but most haven't heard much yet about the insurance exchange required as part of the national health overhaul law.

That's partly because state government, which has chosen to let the federal government set up and run South Dakota's exchange, will not play a role in promoting the exchange or helping people sign up for insurance.

However, a number of health care organizations and other groups are gearing up to help people comply with the requirement that those who can afford it must get insured or face a tax penalty. People of modest means will get government help in paying for insurance.

Officials don't know how many people will seek to buy insurance through the exchange. About 105,000 South Dakotans, or 13 percent of the state's population, are uninsured, according to recent surveys.

The federal government recently awarded nearly $578,000 to six health centers that will help people enroll in health insurance policies offered through the exchange. Another $600,000 in grants will be awarded later.

John Mengenhausen, CEO of Horizon Health Care Inc., based in Howard, said the organization will use its $111,000 grant to hire three or four people who will be trained to help people research the marketplace and get the best insurance they can afford. Horizon Health provides primary care and routine exams in 13 medical clinics and four dental clinics in small towns, and it charges patients on a sliding scale based on their income.

Horizon also will hold public meetings and run ads in

Display Honors Kanner Building's Illustrious Namesake

BY EMILY NIEBRUGGE

Although many people pass through the doors of Yankton's Kanner Building to obtain and renew their driver's licenses, few know why the building bears its name.

Mike Scheuring knows the history, and feels more people should, too. His interest led him to email Gov. Dennis Daugaard requesting a display be put up in the building explaining its history.

The building is named after Dr. Leo Kanner, an Austrian psychiatrist who first identified autism in children. Kanner graduated from the University of Berlin, and in 1924 worked as an assistant physician at

The Yankton School District and Yankton Basketball, Inc. (YBI), have entered into an agreement in which YBI will sponsor the purchase of scoreboards for the high school gym in return for use of district facilities.

The Yankton School Board unanimously approved the agreement Wednesday during a special meeting that was held so that the scoreboards could be ordered and installed as soon as possible.

Under the five-year agreement, YBI, which promotes youth basketball in the Yankton area and holds the annual Roger

Fitzgerald

Haas tournaments, will sponsor the purchase of statistic display boards that will supplement existing scoreboards in the main high school gym. The donation also will include five game clocks — one for each locker room.

The purchases are being made through Daktronics and cost approximately $17,000.

In return, the school district will offer YBI activity space at the elementary and middle schools free of charge for its
