Measles Outbreak Complicates Amish Events

SHILOH, Ohio (AP) — Visitors from around the world to two upcoming events in the state's Amish country could come away with more than they bargained for, health officials fear — a case of measles from the nation's largest outbreak in two decades.

The outbreak, with more than 360 cases, started after Amish travelers to the Philippines contracted measles this year and returned home to rural Knox County. From there, the highly contagious disease spread quickly because of a lower rate of vaccination among the Amish.

Health officials believe the outbreak is slowing in Ohio thanks to vaccination clinics, door-to-door visits by public health nurses and cooperation by the Amish, who quickly quarantined themselves when measles was present. But Horse Progress Days, an international showcase of horse-drawn equipment scheduled for Friday and Saturday, is expected to draw more than 20,000 Amish and others from around the globe. And a large annual auction that raises money to help Amish families pay medical bills for children with birth defects is scheduled for Saturday.

Authorities are trying to spread education — and vaccination.

“Very easily someone could come for these events, be exposed to someone who didn't know that they were sick, and travel home, and start another outbreak in another community somewhere in the United States or overseas,” said Dr. D.J. McFadden, health commissioner in Holmes County, site of Horse Progress Days and home to one of the country's largest Amish populations.

The county has 54 cases of measles and one hospitalization. Most of its Amish were already vaccinated before the outbreak, McFadden said.

Symptoms of measles, which is caused by a virus, include fevers, coughs, rashes and pinkeye. Before widespread vaccinations in the U.S. beginning in the 1950s, 450 to 500 people died each year, 48,000 were hospitalized and nearly 1,000 people suffered brain damage or deafness. Though nearly eradicated in the United States, measles remains common in many parts of Asia, the Pacific and Africa.

The Amish eschew many conveniences of modern life. Their religion does not prevent them from seeking vaccinations, but because their children don't attend traditional public schools, vaccinations are not required and therefore not routine.

For Amish who aren't vaccinated, Ohio health officials say, reasons include religious objections, not seeing the need for a disease that isn't common and what McFadden called benign neglect. “It's just, ‘Well, we didn't go to the doctor, and since we weren't going to the doctor, we just didn't get vaccinated,’” he said.

to be taken up during the zoning approval process. • Approved a plan for the Yankton County Highway Department to apply approximately 1,000 tons of asphalt to the recreational trail along Deer Boulevard prior to Oct. 15. The trail has been a source of controversy since LRC, Inc., substantially completed the project several years ago. County officials say the work was substandard and attempts to get the company to address the problems have been unsuccessful. The project has been complicated because of the use of federal trail funds. Having consulted with Johnson Engineering on the project, Highway Superintendent Brian Gustad said this will be the “quickest, most cost-effective” way to complete the work. The South Dakota Department of Transportation, which administers the federal funding, will have to approve the plan before it proceeds; • Made note that Yankton County was recently recognized by the National Association of Counties with a 2014 Achievement Award for teamwork displayed by 25 to 30 years. The South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks Department would like to purchase and install a siren at the Lewis and Clark Recreational Area. The county will attempt to get a Homeland Security grant to purchase a second siren for the popular tourist attraction.

The commission discussed the possibility of purchasing a couple of the needed sirens each year, possibly attaining more grant funding along the way. Scherschligt said he did not believe the county would be awarded Homeland Security funding if an attempt is made for the 10 sirens simultaneously.

“This is not the only place in the county that we need more sirens,” added Jensen. “This is the area that really needs it now. As we continue, we're going to get other areas of the county.”

Scherschligt said that when the National Weather Service issues a tornado warning, the sirens would be activated. They are also used when there is a severe thunderstorm warning if it includes sustained winds that exceed 60 mph. “These sirens are made for warning people outdoors,” Scherschligt said. “They are not designed to wake you up in the middle of the night when you're sleeping. A lot of people say, ‘I didn't hear the siren blow.’ They are not designed to do that unless your house is right next to the pole.”

The commission is expected to discuss the issue more during the 2015 budgeting process that is currently under way.

“I think sirens are very important. If they can save one life, they'd be worth it,” Jensen said. “That lake area is going to continue growing.”

In other business Tuesday, the commission: • Was told by Sheriff Jim Vlahakis that the sprinkler system in the jail is not made for an institutional setting, meaning inmates have access to it. “They are sprinkler heads you'd find in a school or office building — not what you'd find in a correctional facility,” he said. The system was set off recently and did several thousand dollars of damage. Replacing it with an institutional sprinkler system is estimated to cost $28,000;

• Approved a franchise renewal for NorthWestern Energy, which will allow it to occupy county right-of-way for 20 years. It will also clear the way for the firm to build a 115,000-volt transmission line. “This project is fairly critical for NorthWestern,” said Yankton-area manager Brad Wenande. “It will enhance our ability to serve additional load for both existing customers and customers who may come to Yankton. Secondly, it should have a positive impact on our ability to reliably serve our electric customers in Yankton, Yankton County and our surrounding service territory.” Included in the project will be a new substation being proposed for the east side of Yankton adjacent to NorthWestern's generating facility. Neighbors of the proposed substation expressed concerns about the structure Tuesday and asked that measures be taken to make it blend it with its surroundings. It was acknowledged that is an issue that will have to be taken up during the zoning approval process.

county offices in 2013. Yankton County's award was presented in the County Administration/Management category. The project title was: “Above and Beyond: Register of Deeds fills in as Minutes Man for Auditor.” Due to staff turnover, the Auditor's office operated below normal staffing levels for most of 2013. Register of Deeds Brian Hunhoff volunteered to assist the understaffed department by serving as meeting recorder. Hunhoff devoted many nights and weekends to the task. He eventually completed 12 months of meeting minutes without a single error; and • Agreed to pay $1,200 for aerial photos of Yankton County taken by David Tunge. They will be displayed in the Commission Chambers. The large photos on canvas fabric include Mission Hill, Utica, Lesterville, Gayville, Volin and Lake Marindahl.
