SPORTS DIGEST

Losing Named Coach Of Year; Other Area Coaches To Be Honored

LINCOLN, Neb. — Crofton's Aaron Losing will be presented with the Nebraska Coaches Association's girls' basketball Coach of the Year award during the NCA's annual banquet, July 20 at the Old Lincoln Train Station in the Haymarket, Lincoln, Nebraska.
 Losing's Crofton team won its third consecutive championship this past March, the sixth in 10 years under Losing. During that time, the Warriors have made nine state tournaments, finishing no lower than third in each.
 Also scheduled to be honored during the event is former Crofton coach Gail Peterson, who will receive the NCA Cross Country Award. Peterson moved to Crofton in 1963 and coached CHS to nine girls' and six boys' state titles, retiring in 2002. A 2008 inductee into the Nebraska High School Sports Hall of Fame, he continues to help with the CHS track and field distance runners.
 State championship coaches will also be recognized during the event, including Crofton's Jayne Arens (Class D boys' and girls' cross country) and Bob Hegge (Class C girls' track and field), Randolph's Mark Anderson (Class D1 boys' basketball), Wynot's Steve Wieseler (Class D2 girls' basketball)

Four Players Eligible For NFL's Supplemental Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Four players will be available during the NFL's supplemental draft Thursday.
 League spokesman Michael Signora said in an email that New Mexico receiver Chase Clayton, North Carolina linebacker Darius Liptford, Virginia-Lynchburg defensive tackle Lakendrick Ross and SMU running back Traylon Shead were eligible for the draft.
 The supplemental draft allows qualified underclassmen who did not request early entry into the regular draft to have a chance at entering the NFL. Teams submit picks and are awarded players if their bid — for which round they would take that player — is highest. Teams then lose the corresponding pick in next year's draft.
 Players that are not picked become free agents.

The Boston Celtics' Colton Iverson (37) battles for a rebound against the Detroit Pistons' Justin Harper (32) and Damian James (28) during NBA Summer League action at the Amway Center in Orlando, Fla., on Wednesday. Boston won the game 92-90, with the Yankton native Iverson scoring 11 points and blocking one shot. Iverson and the Celtics face Orlando today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. Central.

"It gets you more court time and you can improve your skills," Cap said, "especially on defense."
 Plus, the faster tempo seen in AAU basketball helps players stay in shape and avoid injuries during their high school seasons, Cap added.
 As Parish said, the high level of competition on a players' own team allows them to focus on their specific skill-set. Mieras agreed, pointing out that she can rely on her teammates.
 "I get to play my game, because I know I have girls on the court who can help me out, or I can help them out," Mieras said.
 Her experience with the Dakota Schoolers played a key role in Mieras attracting the attention of the SDSU coaches, she said.
 "The Schoolers really helped me out with that," Mieras said. "There's a lot of contact with coaches; they get to see you play."
 Mieras said she took part in SDSU's elite camp last week in Brookings, and the experience got her even more excited to play for the Jackrabbits.
 "It's awesome to know where you're going," she said. "It (recruiting) can get stressful, especially if you wait longer."
 Mieras isn't alone within the Dakota Schoolers program in a D-I commitment. Megan Bustna, an incoming junior at Mount Vernon-Junkinton, has already committed to SDSU.
 Coaches from SDSU and USD have been frequent spectators to Schoolers games, according to Parish.
 "College coaches love it, because they can watch 30 kids at the same time," he said. "And if you're looking at a certain kid or a couple kids, you're also seeing other great players."

 For a trio of incoming sophomores at Yankton High School, summer basketball at this point is more about development than catching the eye of a college coach.
 Kami Cornemann, Lindsey Hale and Josie Saylor are all members of the Dakota Schoolers 15-year-old team coached by Pete
