BY MICHAEL ROIZEN, M.D., AND MEHMET OZ, M.D. King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Thanks to amazing medical advances, more people than ever are surviving strokes – the blood clots and leaks that block blood flow to parts of the brain. But here's a new reason not to be among the 795,000 Americans who have one each year: A new study finds that stroke ages your brain by eight years.

When University of Michigan scientists compared memory and thinkingspeed tests before and after a stroke for 4,900 people, they found that having a brain attack eroded mental skills as much as if they'd aged almost a decade overnight.

But here's the good news: While up to one in three Americans is at higherthan-average risk for a stroke, a whopping 80 percent of brain attacks don't have to happen at all! Here's a simple, seven-step plan to protect your noggin:

1. Take high blood pressure very seriously. Out-of-control blood pressure boosts your odds for a stroke four to six times. If you're among the 78 million Americans with hypertension or the 70 million with prehypertension, it's time to act. See your doc if you don't know your blood pressure numbers or if you're not sure they're in the healthy zone – we think 115/75 is a good target for most people. Weight loss, exercise, a produce-packed diet that's naturally low in sodium and taking time to destress can help. And if you're prescribed BP meds, take them! Then keep a spreadsheet of your numbers. Your brain is worth it.

2. Do. Not. Smoke. Cigarettes double your risk for an ischemic stroke, the most common type, caused by blood clots. It raises your risk for a hemorrhagic stroke, caused by a leaky blood vessel, four-fold. It's never too late to quit. Best plan: An anti-crave medication, nicotine-replacement patches and other products like sprays and gums, plus a rock-solid support system.

3. Lower your "lousy" LDL cholesterol. High LDL levels can clog your carotid arteries, the big blood vessels at the sides of your neck that send blood to your brain, with fatty plaque. That boosts stroke risk. Rebalance your LDL cholesterol level by eating fewer saturated fats (in fatty and processed meats, full-fat dairy products and processed foods), enjoying "good" fats, like nuts, olive oil, fatty fish and avocados, in moderation and walking 10,000 steps every day, no excuses. If your doc recommends a cholesterol-lowering statin, take it. Studies show that folks with a high stroke risk can lower their odds for a brain attack 21 percent by taking a statin. Statins also help prevent the brain aging that results from a stroke.

4. Control diabetes. Blood-sugar problems boost stroke risk by 50percent. High blood pressure and high cholesterol often come with diabetes. Keep blood sugar in line, too.

5. Eat well. A Mediterranean diet – full of produce, good fats, fish, beans, plus some nuts, olive oil and red wine in moderation – could reduce your stroke risk by 18 percent, according to new research from Spain. You brain will thank you for eating like you're on a Mediterranean vacation, relaxing on the patio with grilled fish, a big salad and a glass of wine.

6. Get sweaty. Get 10,000 steps a day. Once you're doing that, add tennis, gardening or swimming. Any activity that challenges you a little bit cuts odds for "ministrokes" - transient ischemic attacks, which often presage a full-blown stroke – by 40 percent. These little strokes double your risk for brain dysfunction and boost your odds for a full-blown stroke five-fold. And they're common: About 11 percent of people between ages 55-65 and 50 percent of people over age 80 have them.

7. Act fast. If you or a loved one has any signs of a stroke, call 911 right away. Signs include weakness or numbness on one side of the body; sudden confusion or trouble understanding; trouble talking; dizziness, loss of balance or trouble walking; difficulty seeing or double vision; and/or severe headache. Remember, time lost is brain lost.

West Nile Virus Arrives In Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. — West Nile virus is synonymous with summer in Nebraska. A mosquito pool in Webster County is the first one to test positive for the virus this season.

We spend more time outdoors over the Fourth of July and throughout the summer which increases our chances of mosquito and other bug bites," said Dr. Tom Safranek, State Epidemiologist for the Nebraska Department of Health and Human Services. "Remember to take simple steps like using bug spray to help protect you and your family.

Other preventive tips: Make sure your mosquito repellent contains DEET, picaridin, lemon eucalyptus oil or IR3535.

• Dress in long-sleeved shirts, pants and socks when you're outside.

• Dusk and dawn are times when mosquitoes are most active. Limit outdoor activities.

 Drain standing water around your home. Standing water and warmth breed mosquitoes.

West Nile virus is transmitted to people through the bite of a mosquito that picked up the virus by feeding on an infected bird. DHHS started its West Nile virus surveillance at the beginning of June. No birds have tested positive for West Nile virus and there are no human cases so far.

Last year there were 142 human cases in Nebraska and eight deaths. Most people who are infected will have no symptoms or only mild flu-like symptoms. Some people will develop a fever with other symptoms like headache, body aches, vomiting, fatigue and weakness. Less than one percent of people will develop a serious illness like encephali tis or meningitis (inflammation of the brain and surrounding tissues). People over 50 and those with weakened immune systems are especially vulnerable to the disease and are more likely to experience serious consequences. Nebraskans should also trv to avoid ticks. Ticks can cause ehrlichiosis, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, tularemia and Lyme disease. Symptoms of tick- and mosquito-related illnesses can be similar — fever, rash, body aches and pains. Tick-related illnesses can be serious as well.

Tips to protect yourself from tick bites:

• Wearing insect repellent also protects you from ticks. Dressing in long-sleeved shirts, pants and socks help keep ticks off your skin.

• Do frequent tick checks after being outdoors and remove attached ticks promptly with fine-tipped tweezers.

For more information about West Nile Virus, go to www.dhhs.ne.gov/wnv. You can find out more about tickrelated diseases here www. cdc.gov/ticks/.
