New Restriction For S.D. Livestock Imports

PIERRE (AP) — People bringing livestock into South Dakota from states where vesicular stomatitis has been confirmed must now have a health certificate.

State Veterinarian Dustin Oedekoven says the certificate must state the animals have not come from areas under quarantine and are not known to have been exposed to VS. The health certificate must be issued within 72 hours of shipment.

South Dakota's Animal Industry Board put the rule into effect this week after VS was confirmed in a horse in Arizona.

The virus causes blister-like lesions in the mouth and on the tongue, lips, nostrils, hooves, teats.

Oil Frenzy Spills Into Neb., Schools Get The Money

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A scramble for oil in Colorado and Wyoming has spilled over into western Nebraska, and the state's public schools will benefit from the gush of money.

Officials with the state's Board of Educational Lands and Funds say an oil and gas lease sale it held about two weeks ago attracted record-high bids totaling more than $1.9 million, almost four times the previous record set two years ago.

"This sale was just unbelievable, and it all goes to the schoolchildren," said Laura Bahr-Frew, mineral rights administrator for the lands and funds board.

The board owns the 1.3 million acres left from a land contribution by the federal government in 1867 and collects rent on thousands of agricultural leases. It also collects rent on mineral leases from some of that land, and land it has sold in previous years.

Most of the leases purchased during the recent sale are for exploration in the Panhandle's western edge near the Wyoming and Colorado borders, with the highest bids for leases in Kimball and Banner counties.

There, bids for two sections of land exceeded $300 per acre, with one approached $400. The previous high bid Bahr-Frew could recall was about $100. That was more than 20 years ago.

Spurring the speculation is a recent oil find in Weld County, Colo., which borders Kimball County to the south, said Bill Sydow, director of the state Oil and Gas Conservation Commission.

New drilling technology used in North

Dakota's geologically similar — and booming — Bakken formation has also led to speculation that a similar boom could happen along the Niobrara shale now under exploration. It extends beneath western Nebraska and northeastern Colorado, as well as southeastern Wyoming.

Sydow was lukewarm about the chances of significant oil finds in three of the four counties where almost all the leases were purchased — Kimball, Scotts Bluff and Sioux — and said people he has talked to believe most of the oil is in Colorado and Wyoming. Record-high bids that dwarf Nebraska's $1.9 million were recently set in those states.

He characterized the oil prospects for the four-county area as "up in the air."
