U Law Professor Receives Award For Excellence In Teaching

VERMILLION — Professor Thomas E. Geu is the 2010 recipient of the John Wesley Jackson Outstanding Faculty Award at The University of South Dakota School of Law. Geu was nominated by students and colleagues on the faculty at the Law School.

"Tom Geu is a dedicated classroom teacher, innovative legal scholar, and national leader in law reform," said Dean Barry Vickrey. "He works as hard as any other professor I have known anywhere in any discipline to improve constantly the instruction he provides students. The U Law School is truly fortunate to have him as a member of our faculty and he is a deserving recipient of the Jackson Award.

This is the second time Geu has been selected to receive the Jackson Award (1997). Geu will receive a plaque and a cash award and his name will also be inscribed on a separate plaque that is retained permanently in the School of Geu's scholarship and service to the profession is extensive. He has served in the important role of national reporter for the Uniform Limited Cooperative Act and as South Dakota Commissioner for the Uniform Laws Commission. Geu is also an elected member of the American Law Institute and has been active in the State Bar of South Dakota. His areas of teaching at U School of Law include organizational, transactional, and capital formation courses, and he also writes broadly on business organization law. He has a research interest in determining whether law is a complex adaptive system (as is an ecosystem). Geu's mother and father farm near Sidney, Neb., and his

Clinical Psychology Doctoral Receives Accreditation

VERMILLION — The University of South Dakota's doctoral program in clinical psychology was awarded full accreditation for the maximum term given by the American Sychological Association (APA) Commission on Accreditation. The accreditation followed a review of the U program's self study report, submitted last year, and a three-person team that visited the program last fall.

"The program takes very seriously the opportunity to engage in ongoing self-assessment and continues to institute programmatic changes designed to improve students' competency in the evolving profession, particularly in research and clinical domains," said Dr. Susan Zlotlow, director of the APA's Office of Program Consultation and Accreditation. "Overall, program outcome data demonstrate that the vast majority of students are meeting or exceeding thresholds for program goals, objectives and competencies.' The only doctoral program of its kind in South Dakota, the clinical psychology program at U is recognized nationally for its training emphases in rural community psychology, disaster psychology and diversity. Through its affiliation with the U Disaster Mental Health Institute, the clinical program is also the first doctoral program in the nation to offer a specialty track in clinical/disaster psychology and a graduate certificate in disaster mental health. Zlotlow and the committee noted program's attention to diversity through recruitment, retention, education and evaluation. "We are proud of our accomplishments in this area and honored that APA has chosen to highlight these programs, said Dr. Barbara Yutrzenka, Ph.D., professor and director of the clinical psychology program. "We are committed to preparing socially responsible clinical psychologists who demonstrate respect for individual and cultural differences in their contributions to the science and practice of psychology. The clinical psychology program recently celebrated its 38th year of continual accreditation by the APA. Having received the maximum term for accreditation following this year's review, the program's next site visit by the APA will be during the 2016-2017 academic year.

The program, which includes eight full-time faculty and 17 adjunct faculty and affiliated supervisors, offers graduate training leading to a master's degree and a doctoral degree within the department of psychology. Currently 39 students are enrolled in the clinical psychology program. Since 1972, more than 215 clinical students have received doctorates from the program and are now working in different capacities across the United States. For more information, about the clinical psychology program at U, please visit the department's Web site at www.usd.edu/clinicalpsyc or contact Yutrzenka at (605) 677-5353.
