everything ended. We made it pretty far and we had a great season. It was a great way to end."

The end of Krier's college career was also the beginning of his professional career — as a math teacher.

Krier will be a teacher at Gayville and he will also help coach the Raiders basketball team.

Then when the Mount Marty baseball season starts, Krier won't be a stranger.

"Coaching is definitely in my future," said Krier, whose dad is a coach. "I worked it out with Bernatow so I will be able to help with the team as well."

Whether as a player or a future coach, Bernatow said Krier's impact will always be remembered.

"That was the best pitching season in the history of Lancers' baseball; I don't think it will ever be duplicated," he said. "A lot of times, I had the best seat in the house when he pitched."

good, and with what they have for coursework, it's amazing they can be athletes with how well they do in the classroom."

Dillon Lambley made the Scholar All-American list for the first time.

Lambley said he just makes sure the academics side is the main focus.

"It's something you always work for, and it gets busy with baseball and school and tough to keep up, but you keep in mind that you are there for school," he said. "Bernatow does a good job of working with us when it gets busy. It makes it difficult with both, but you know both of them are your priorities."

Lambley is a business finance major and he has a 3.7 GPA.

"A long time ago with the family Dillon has, they instilled a great work ethic in him," Bernatow said. "He is a hard worker, a good kid and he keeps the grades up."

Nathan Roche was the sixth player who made the list, and it was also his first time making the list.

Bernatow said Roche put in some extra time in order to try and make the list this year.

"Nathan took an extra class in the fall to create this opportunity," he said. "Nathan doesn't miss church on Sundays, and he does a pretty good job as a ball player."

for his ability and background.

"He's been a target guy for us all spring," said Joe Jordan, the Orioles' scouting director.

Cal State Fullerton shortstop Christian Colon went to Kansas City at No. 4, and could end up playing second base, while Cleveland took Ole Miss left-hander Drew Pomeranz, the Southeastern Conference pitcher of the year with the Justin Bieber haircut and a 90-94 mph fastball.

Harper is expected to seek a record contract through his adviser, Scott Boras, who last year negotiated a record-breaking four-year, $15.1 million deal with the Nationals for Strasburg. The top overall pick last June is scheduled to make his major league debut Tuesday, almost a year to the day after he was drafted.

"I can't remember where back-to-back years where there's two players that have separated themselves from the rest of the field," Rizzo said. "In that respect, it is very, very unique. I think it's a lucky time to have two No. 1 picks overall."

The Nationals have through Aug. 16 to sign Harper, who has said he has plenty of options, including going back to Southern Nevada for another year if negotiations go awry.

"He's a player that wants to get out and play," Rizzo said. "He's the type of guy that does not enjoy idle time."

Harper was the subject of a Sports Illustrated cover story while still in high school, and has reportedly hit balls over 550 feet. A hitter has not garnered that much national attention since possibly Florida State's J.D. Drew, who went No. 2 overall to Philadelphia in 1997 but didn't sign a contract.

Drew, also a Boras client, played in an independent league and signed the following year after he went fifth overall to St. Louis.

Texas A&M righty Barret Loux went sixth to Arizona, and North Carolina right-hander Matt Harvey was selected by the New York Mets at No. 7. Houston next took Georgia high school outfielder Delino DeShields Jr., son of the former big leaguer of the same name.

Florida high school righty Karsten Whitson went ninth to San Diego, and Texas-Arlington outfielder Michael Choice rounded out the top 10 picks by going to Oakland.

Mountain West Standing Pat; No Offer To Boise

BY JAKE SCHALLER

(Colorado Springs, Colo.)

The Mountain West Conference has not added blue turf to its landscape.

At least not yet.

At the conclusion of the league's board of directors meetings in Jackson, Wyo., on Monday, MWC commissioner Craig Thompson announced the league had decided, for now, to stand pat and not expand to include Boise State — whose football team plays on the famous synthetic blue "Smurf Turf" — or any other schools.

But he added that "the topic of expansion still is very much alive."

"After an in-depth review of our membership, we think that due to the uncertainty in the intercollegiate landscape and the potential for significant shifts potentially in the immediate future, the board did not make a decision to expand at the present time," Thompson said. "The Mountain West will continue to monitor developments and conduct its due diligence. We're very thorough in all our discussions and prepared for potential scenarios."

Air Force superintendent Lt. Gen. Michael C. Gould, the academy's representative at the meetings, declined comment through an academy spokesman and deferred to Thompson.

Many expected the MWC to make a formal invitation to Boise State (currently of the Western Athletic Conference) on Monday. Several Boise media outlets were in Jackson anticipating such an announcement.

Adding Boise State would have given the MWC a Top 10 football team — one that compiled the best winning percentage in all of major college football from 2000 through 2009 (112-17, .868) — and immediately increased the clout of a league trying to achieve automatic-qualifying status in the BCS. It also seemed to be a proactive move, with rumors of massive conference shake-ups swirling and several MWC schools having been mentioned as possible targets of other leagues.

But a vote about whether to invite Boise — seven of the nine schools would have had to vote in favor of it — never took place. And the conference appears ready to wait and see what happens with other conferences discussing change, like the Big Ten, Pac-10 and Big 12, before making a move.

Thompson said the board discussed many schools, in addition to Boise State, and the possibility of adding more than one school if it did expand.

"We've all read and heard about the possibility of 16-member mega-conferences," he said. "And that was part of the discussion — Should we only look at 10? Should we look at 12? Should we look at 16?"

Thompson stressed that expansion could be discussed again — possibly on short notice — depending on what happens during the next several weeks.

"Basically (the school presidents are) all on point that the next time I call them it's an important call and please be a part of the conversation," Thompson said. "There is no finite time line, but it absolutely could be ... two weeks from now, a week from now, a month from now, never. But it will be and can be revisited appropriately."

There is a closing window for adding Boise State for the 2011 season. Boise State would have to inform the WAC of its decision to leave by July 1.
