NEW YORK (AP) — There was no question at No. 1 in the last two baseball drafts. The Washington Nationals — and pretty much everyone else — knew for weeks that they would likely take fireballing righty Stephen Strasburg in 2009 and powerful slugger Bryce Harper a year ago.

Well, it's the Pittsburgh Pirates' turn with the first overall pick Monday night, and they don't have it as easy. That's not to say they don't have plenty of options, but none quite as clear cut as Strasburg and Harper were.

"Publicly, Pirates general manager Neal Huntington said, 'I'll absolutely come down to 2 minutes before the draft.'"
