George Kingsbury, started producing a daily issue of a sheet called the Yankton Black Hiller promoting Yankton as the most logical jumping-off point for gold country. The Black Hiller was so successful that it naturally moved the Press & Dakotan to a daily newspaper in April 1875.

Operating for nearly 120 years as an afternoon paper, the P&D moved to a morning publication in 1993 to better serve the changing needs of its readership. It moved into the online world in 1997 and established a web presence that now receives more than 1 million page views a month. The Yankton Daily Press and Dakotan now also serves readers via Twitter, Facebook and mobile devices.

It appears the paper was started in a log building on the west side of Broadway between Second and Third streets. For a brief period of time in 1862, the newspaper building was used to house refugees that had come to Yankton afraid of a possible hostile attack after the famous Mankato Minnesota Massacre. The building that houses the paper today was built as Turner Hall and dedicated during a two-day event on May 12-13, 1880. It was used for gymnastic and entertainment events until 1902 when the Dakota Theater was built and the Press & Dakotan moved in shortly thereafter.

The paper has evolved with the times, too, formation booth throughout the event were all positive.

"The crowd loved it," she said. "So many people kept stepping up and saying we should do this every year."

Russell said there are no plans at this time to make it a yearly event, although he didn't eliminate the possibility, either.

"It is just way too early to have that
