Yankton School Board To Hold Monthly Meeting

The Yankton School Board will hold its monthly meeting at 5:30 p.m. on Monday at the administration building.

Items on the agenda include addressing funding for Title I and Title II programs, considering an increase in school lunch prices, canvassing the opt-out election results and discussing grade 5-8 activities.

The meeting is open to the public.

Johnson Welcomes Vermillion Natives

WASHINGTON — Sen. Tim Johnson (D-S.D.) has welcomed Sean Pederson and Lukas Autenried of Vermillion to his Washington office as summer interns.

Pederson is the son of Jeff and Andrea Pederson of Paducah, Kan., and the grandson of Leland Arntsen of Tyndall. Pederson received his degree in Political Science from the University of Kansas and recently completed his Masters of Public Administration at the University of South Dakota.

A graduate of Conrad High School in West Hartford, Conn., Autenried is the son of Peter and Kathy Autenried of Vermillion. Autenried is a senior at Georgetown University where he majors in Political Science and History.

"Through internships, students gain valuable insight into the political process in Washington," Johnson said. "I am pleased that Sean has been able to join us this summer and I know he will make the most of his experience."

College sophomores, juniors and seniors are encouraged to apply for Johnson's upcoming fall internship program. College credits or a stipend are available.

To apply for a state office internship, please call toll-free at 1-800-537-0025. To apply for a Washington legislative or press internship during the summer term or beyond, interested students should submit a cover letter, resume, references, and a writing sample to:

• General Internship — Senator Tim Johnson, Attn: Intern Coordinator, 136 Hart SOB, Washington, DC.

• Press Internship — Senator Tim Johnson, Attn: Todd Deutsch, Press Intern Coordinator, 136 Hart SOB, Washington, DC 20510; by fax to: 202-228-7575; by email to: Todd_Deutsch@johnson.senate.gov

World's Largest Swimming Lesson Set For Tues.

On Tuesday, June 14, thousands of kids and adults at aquatics facilities around the globe will unite to set a new global record for The World's Largest Swimming Lesson™ (WLSL).

Avera Sacred Heart Wellness Center is an official Host Location for the 2011 WLSL record-setting event, taking place at 10 a.m.

The inaugural WLSL event established the Guinness World Record for the largest simultaneous swimming lesson ever conducted in 2010 when almost 4,000 participants across 34 states, five countries and three continents participated to build awareness about the vital importance of teaching children to swim to prevent drowning.

For more information and to find out how you can join the WLSL record breaking, contact Angie O'Connor at Avera Sacred Heart Wellness Center 605-668-8357 or via email at aoconnor@avera.org or visit www.wlsl.org.

Blood Donor Promotion Encourages Donations

LifeServe Blood Center is offering a new and improved "What Color Do You Bleed" blood donor promotion this summer. This special campaign gives blood donors the opportunity to show support for their favorite local university, Iowa State University, the University of Iowa, the University of Northern Iowa, the University of Nebraska, the University of South Dakota or South Dakota State University, by donating blood.

Everyone who registers to donate blood at the next Yankton Community Blood Drive will be eligible to redeem a "What Color Do You Bleed" T-shirt in their favorite team colors for just 100 points at LifeServe Blood Center's Online Store.

Show your school spirit by making a life-saving blood donation blood at the next Yankton Community Blood Drive. The blood drive will take place on Tuesday, June 14, running from 8 a.m.-2 p.m. in the bus at Avera Sacred Heart Hospital/Benedictine Center, 501 Summit.

For more information or to schedule an appointment to donate, contact LifeServe Blood Center at 800-287-4903 or visit www.lifeservebloodcenter.org.

Extension Garden Presentation Set For June 15

BROOKINGS — The South Dakota Cooperative Extension Service will offer a garden presentation on using manure in the garden safely in Brookings on June 15.

The presentation will be held in Room D at the Brookings County Resource Center at 5:30 p.m.

The GreenScapes program teaches backyard sustainability and conservation for home gardeners.

This event is free and open to the public. Individuals who require special assistance can let the organizers know.

Cynthia Bergman, Yankton County Extension Horticulture Educator, will offer tips on soil health and the use of manure in gardens.

Manure is a wonderful source of organic matter for your garden and a great source of nutrients like nitrogen. But there can be many problems with using manure, such as slow release of nutrients, unbalanced nutrients, high salt levels, pathogens such as e-coli bacteria, contaminants such as hormones and antibiotics, herbicides residue, and weed seeds.

Learn how to find out what's in manure and how to use it safely.

Call Extension Horticulture Educator Cynthia Bergman in Yankton at 605-665-3387 or the Brookings Area Master Gardener group (Mary DeLeeuw at 605-826-4338).

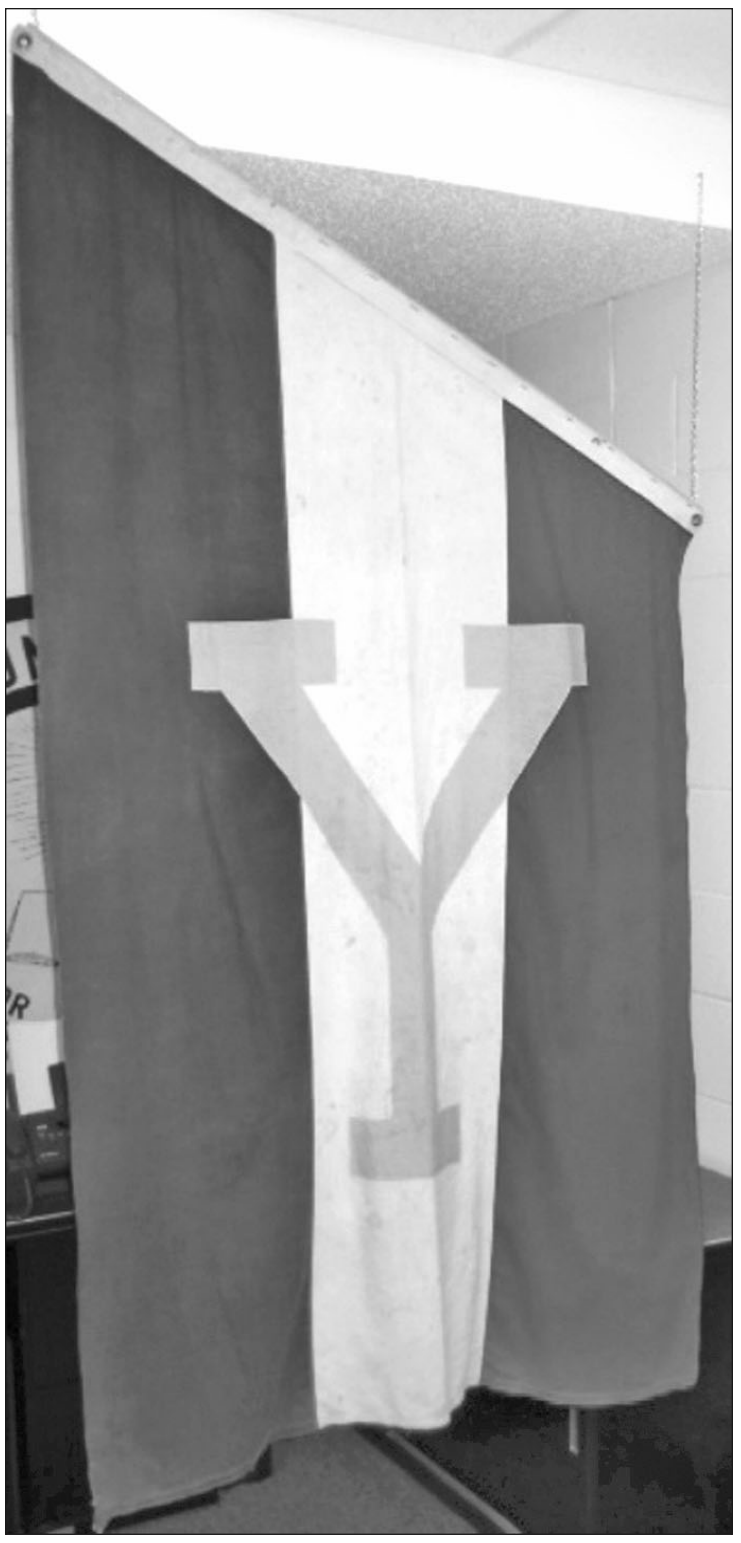
MYSTERY FLAG



COURTESY PHOTO

The staff at Yankton College recently discovered this flag amongst college items and does not know its origin. It has three panels sewn descending in size that are colored red, white and blue with a yellow Y in the middle. If you know of its origin and/or historical significance, call Yankton College at (605) 665-3661 or email jan@yanktoncollege.org.

eye-opening experience for all of us."

Six students, ranging from seventh grades to high school sophomores, made up the first class.

Seventh grader Kate Katterhagen said she took the class because of her parents' influence and was glad she did.

"My parents both work with mental health and I wanted to learn more about the jobs available," she said. "I didn't know there were that many jobs. I really liked the tours and the mental wellness class."

Eighth grader Sarah Odom said after taking a personality test, she thought she might enjoy a career in the mental health field.

"I took a test online at school and it gave me ideas on what I might be interested in for careers. I saw marriage and family therapist so I thought that might be interesting," she said. "I decided to take this class and I actually liked it a lot. We didn't talk much about marriage and family therapists, but I did learn more things about mental health."

The students earned their credit based on attendance, assessment test, writing projects and a culmination project where they each researched a different topic that dealt with mental health.

The final projects were presented Friday at an open house at the Technical Education Center and ranged from diseases, careers and history of centers for mental health.

The students also had the opportunity to attend the Yankton Area Mental Wellness Conference at Mount Marty which gave them more of an awareness of what professionals do and was something most high school students don't get to experience, Duke said.

For her final project, Katterhagen decided to make a poster on important training she thinks everyone should go through.

"My poster is about nonviolent crisis intervention training," she said. "It's a worldwide program to de-escalate crisis situations and I think most occupations should have that training. It's important for people to learn more about it."

Duke said she thought the class had a successful first year because it was unlike anything else that is offered to students.

"I think the feedback I've heard from professionals at the conference, the students and their parents just coming back and saying, 'I didn't know about this' or 'I'd never heard about that,'" she said. "We did a lot of career exploration projects and different things. They had to do a lot of the things they would have to do in a normal classroom setting, but it was a lot more fun and a different environment."

Although class numbers weren't as high as organizers wanted, Duke said they plan on continuing the course.

"This has been a learning year for all of us — the first year, you never really know how it's going to go," she said. "We had hoped for a larger group, but I'm glad we had a smaller group because that way we see what works and what doesn't.

"We already have plans to meet next week after this class ends and start going through some of the things we want to change, what we want to add, what we want to take away. We have plans to continue it and I certainly hope that it will be something students in future years will take advantage of."

Kate's older brother Kyle is a sophomore and agrees with Duke that the class should be continued.

"I took this class to learn about possible mental health careers and to get the half credit towards my high school graduation," he said. "It was a neat experience because it's not offered at the high school. I think it should be offered again so other kids can take it and learn more about mental health."

Odom encourages other students to take advantage of what the course has to offer.

"If you are interested in mental health or think you don't know enough information about it, you should take this class so you know a lot more. It made me more aware of things I didn't realize before," she said.

With one in every four individuals being affected by a mental illness, Duke said she was glad the students realized it affects not just the individual, but also everyone around them.

"I think just bringing in the awareness — whether or not they want to go into a career that is directly related to it — at least they've gotten the awareness and are more aware of what people are going through when they have a mental illness," she said. "I think that was a big part of the class — just to get that awareness out there."
