

Suicide Bombers, Gunmen Attack Kabul Hotel

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Four suicide bombers and four gunmen attacked a Western-style hotel in Kabul late Tuesday night and police who rushed to the scene fought the assailants with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades, Afghan officials said. Some Afghan provincial governors were staying at the hotel. Samoonyar Mohammad Zaman, a security officer for the Ministry of Interior, said officials believe there are still four gunmen in the Inter-Continental hotel, which sits on a hill overlooking the capital. "They may be on the roof. We're seeing gunfire going back and forth. Some of that is Afghan police firing from hilltops onto the roof," he said. "I saw the bodies of two suicide bombers at the main entrance of the hotel." Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid claimed responsibility for the attack in a telephone call to The Associated Press.

Blaze Near N.M. Nuke Lab Burns 60,000 Acres

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Fire managers say it's a "make or break day" Tuesday for ensuring flames from a wildfire don't race into a northern New Mexico town that is home to a government nuclear laboratory that stores sensitive materials. The wildfire — which has swelled to about 93 square miles — sparked a spot fire at the Los Alamos National Laboratory on Monday. The fire was quickly contained, and lab officials said no contamination was released and radioactive materials stored at spots on the sprawling lab were safe. Lab officials and fire managers said they're confident the flames won't reach key buildings or areas where radioactive waste is stored in barrels above ground. For the stored waste, officials say a last resort would include spraying foam on the barrels to ensure they aren't damaged by fire.

Obama Given Limited Authority For Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate panel voted Tuesday to give President Barack Obama limited authority to continue the U.S. military operation against Libya, exposing deep divisions in Congress over the commander in chief's actions. Just three days after the House overwhelmingly rejected a similar step, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee endorsed a resolution to authorize the effort against Moammar Gadhafi's forces for one year while prohibiting U.S. ground troops in Libya. The vote was 14-5 and muddled the message emerging from Congress about the American role in the NATO-led operation. Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., the panel's chairman, said the bottom-line question three months into the conflict and with Gadhafi "bunkered down in Tripoli" and facing an arrest warrant from the International Criminal Court is: "Do we want to stop the operation?"

46 Hurt On Eve Of Key Greek Vote

BY ELENA BECATOROS AND DEREK GATOPOULOS
Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece — Hours of rioting outside Greece's parliament left 46 people injured Tuesday, on the eve of a vote by lawmakers to adopt more painful austerity measures — a condition for bailout funds needed to prevent a potentially disastrous default. At least 14 people were arrested, authorities said, as youths clashed with riot police on-and-off for more than 10 hours and into the night, leaving the city center filled with tear gas and strewn with smashed-up marble paving stones. Unions had begun a 48-hour strike that shut down services and staged mass rallies throughout the capital in another day of chaotic protest. The new austerity measures must be passed in a two-part vote on Wednesday and Thursday if Greece's international creditors are to release the next (euro) 12 billion batch of the country's (euro) 110 billion bailout fund — and prevent a default that could drag down European banks and shake the European and world economy. "Voting these measures is required to maintain our credibility in the (bailout) process," Finance Minister Evangelos Venizelos said. "Voting for these measures, regardless of any reservations, is an important, brave act of political responsibility." The Socialist government, which survived a revolt by party dissenters this month, is again taking them on by imposing the new punishing four-year program of spending cuts and tax hikes on even those on minimum wages — prompting anger inside parliament and out on the street. The government has a majority of just five seats in the 300-member assembly. More than 5,000 police will again be on hand Wednesday to try and thwart plans by protesters to block lawmakers' access to parliament. "The austerity measures are not only harsh, not only unfair, but they are also ineffective," Socialist critic Vasso Papandreou told parliament late Tuesday. Still, she said she would grudgingly vote for the bill. "Greece has many problems but the real problem is the eurozone," said Papandreou, a former EU commissioner. "Europe should be a zone of solidarity, but it is a jungle where the banks can do what they like." Police and health officials said 37 policemen and nine protesters were hurt in Tuesday's clashes. Rioters set fire to giant parasols at an outdoor cafe, using some to form barricades, and smashed windows of a McDonald's outlet and other snack shops. Staff at upscale hotels handed out surgical masks to tourists and helped them with rolling luggage past the rioting, over ground strewn with rubble. Later, youths set fire to a satellite truck parked near parliament, which rolled downhill into a kiosk whose freezer exploded. Hooded youths ducked behind the burning truck to help themselves to ice-cream cones. "The situation that the workers are going through is tragic and we are near poverty levels," said Spyros Linardopoulos, a protester with the PAME union that was blockading the port of Piraeus earlier in the day. "The government has declared war and to this war we will answer back with war."

Lagarde To Lead IMF; First Woman In Top Job

BY CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER AND SARAH DILORENZO
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — French Finance Minister Christine Lagarde was chosen Tuesday to lead the International Monetary Organization and will immediately confront a European debt crisis that threatens the global economy. Lagarde will be the first female managing director of the 66-year-old global lending organization and the 11th European. Next week, she will begin a five-year term. Among her challenges, she will have to prod fellow Europeans to take painful steps to prevent a default by Greece. She'll face pressure from developing nations that want a greater voice at the IMF. And she'll be looked upon to restore the IMF's reputation, which was tarred by a scandal involving Dominique Strauss-Kahn, the man she's replacing. Strauss-Kahn resigned last month after being charged with sexually assaulting a New York City hotel housekeeper. He has denied the charges. "I am deeply honored by the trust placed in me," Lagarde said in a statement in Paris after the vote Tuesday. "I would like to thank the fund's global membership warmly for the broad-based support I have received." Lagarde was chosen by consensus, the IMF said in a statement. Her selection became all but assured once the Obama administration endorsed her earlier Tuesday. Hours later, the IMF's 24-member board voted to appoint her. She had also won support from Europe, China and Russia. Mexico's Agustin Carstens challenged her, but his candidacy never caught fire. In an interview on French television after the announcement, Lagarde said her first priority is to unify the IMF's staff of 2,500 employees and 800 economists and restore their confidence in the organization. She also said she wants to meet with Strauss-Kahn, if permitted to by the U.S. government. "I want to have a long talk with him, because a successor should talk with their predecessor," Lagarde said during the interview on French television channel TF1. "I can learn things from what he has to say about the IMF and its teams." Lagarde, 55, will be the first IMF leader who is not an economist. She led the Chicago-based law firm Baker & McKenzie before entering French politics in 2005.
