ginning the search process. Advertising and recruitment will last about 45 days. Finalists will be recommended to the commission in approximately 60 days. The commission will select a handful of finalists and arrange interviews with them in the next three to four weeks. Once a candidate is hired, city managers then usually give a notice of 30-40 days to their employers.

Commissioner Charlie Gross said the committee was told by Mercer to expect a smaller pool of candidates than the approximately 45 Yankton had to choose from when it hired Russell.

"The reason you won't have as large of a pool this time is people are unwilling to move because of the fear of their inability to sell their homes," he said. "So people that might otherwise have looked at something like Yankton might be reluctant at this time."

The commission unanimously agreed to proceed with finalizing a contract with the Mercer Group.

Commissioner Dave Carda was absent from Monday's meeting.

Also Monday, Finance Officer Al Viereck said the city continues to struggle with a water intake pipe that has been covered up by a sandbar since the Missouri River channel changed in the aftermath of the 2011 flood.

Divers are attaching an elbow on the end of the intake that will raise the end of it by three to four feet above the sandbar. City officials hope that will resolve the problem at least temporarily so peak water demand during the summer can be met.

In other business, the commission awarded a $67,900 bid for a fuel truck to be used at Chan Gurney Airport.

ioral Health Center and not the Yankton School District. The employee will work from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. on days when school is in session and children are present.

Specific duties of the counselor include working with the students, both individually and in small groups; implementing classroom education curriculum; and conducting school prevention and education activities.

The counselor will also communicate with school staff and administrators, and present information about the program at faculty and departmental meetings.

The Yankton School District experienced a drastic increase in drugs and alcohol use last year, and officials hope this program will help put an end to that.

Other business taking place at the school board meeting included the elementary schools in the district changing the wording on their handbook— wording that Webster principal Melanie Ryken called "outdated."

"We tried to make topics relevant to the kids in a way parents could understand it, too," Ryken said.

Attendance policy at the elementary schools was also updated. The new policy will allow officials to show up at the home of a student unexcused from school in order to make sure the child is OK and accounted for.

The meeting also featured an updating of the Yankton High School electronics policy. The previous policy did not allow students to have their cell phones at any time while at school. The new policy allows students to have the phones with them, but the devices must be turned off. The high school is also going to allow more Kindles and E-Readers as long as they are in use for school-related work and only when they are allowed to be in use.

"We need to get on board with it, and this is the first step," Dr. Wayne Kindle, principal of Yankton High School, said.

The next board meeting will be held at 5:30 p.m. July 9 in the YSD administration building at 2410 West City Limits Road.

congressional investigation and the reasons for the significant delay in acknowledging reckless conduct in Operation Fast and Furious."

Justice Department spokeswoman Tracy Schmalter said that "from the beginning, Chairman Issa has distorted the facts, ignored testimony and flung inaccurate accusations at the attorney general and others, and this latest move fits within that tired political playbook that has so many Americans disillusioned with Washington."

In a letter to Issa, Deputy Attorney General James Cole said the move toward a contempt vote was premature because there have been productive staff discussions in two meetings over the past few weeks.

White House spokesman Jay Carney said the attorney general has appeared eight times on Capitol Hill where he has undergone questioning about the problems in Fast and Furious.

Sen. Chuck Grassley, whose investigation first turned up problems in Operation Fast and Furious, said the action by the House committee "is straightforward and necessary. Contempt is the only tool Congress has to enforce a subpoena."
