Trinity Lutheran Church Recital This Weekend

Trinity Lutheran Church of Yankton presents its second annual recital series "Rivercity Musicale," set for 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 15, and 2 p.m. Sunday, June 17. Composers featured in Friday's recital include Anton Dvorak, Vaughn Williams, Johannes Brahms and Benjamin Britten. Sunday's recital includes compositions by Franz Schubert, Robert Schumann, Emmanuel Chabrier, Arnold Schoenberg, Kenneth Fuchs and Madeline Dring. Oboist Mark Ackerman, principle oboe with the San Antonio Symphony, active chamber music player and artistic director of the Olmos Ensemble, will be playing his third recital at Trinity, having played a recital in 2009 and in last year's musical. He will be joined by oboist/English hornist Mason Tran and bassoonist Mindy Braithwaite.

A native of Canton, Tran has spent this past year in San Antonio where he was guest principle oboe with The Heart of Texas Concert Band and the University of Texas at San Antonio's Symphony Orchestra; he is an active freelance artist and a voice actor, specializing in audiobook narration. Braithwaite is a Sioux Falls resident, a member of the South Dakota Symphony, The Northwest Iowa Symphony, the Augustana Community Orchestra and the Dakota Wind Ensemble. Vocalist for the two recitals is Yankton native Solveig Nyberg of Portland, Ore. Solveig teaches voice and is choir director at Mount Hood Community College in Portland; she has sung with the Dale Warland Singers in Minneapolis and the Bach Festival in Eugene, Oregon. Solveig's parents, Dr. James and Marilyn Nyberg, are the pianists for the festival. Jim is a retired dentist and avid amateur pianist; Marilyn has been organist at Trinity since 1966; both are active piano teachers. Trinity is located at 403 Broadway and, because of construction, must be entered from the west, north or east entrances. Parking is in the lot west of the church and in the lot across Broadway. The recitals are free, but donations will be gratefully accepted. A reception follows Sunday's performance.

Young Preacher Makes Family Proud

BY MANYA A. BRACHEAR

CHICAGO — The teen preacher addressed each person in the pew: the grandmother, the teenage usher, the unemployed father, the single mom. "You are only blessed because you can be a blessing to others," he implored, and the faithful of Greater New Mount Eagle Missionary Baptist Church rose to their feet in praise that could be heard outside on 123rd Street. Some hollered "Amen!" Others applauded. One woman slipped out to cry, moved as much by the message as its messenger: the Rev. Donald Abram, age 17. On Friday, Abram graduated from Chicago Military Academy in Bronzeville. In the fall he will leave behind the tough neighborhood of Roseland and head for the lush green campus of Pomona College in sunny Claremont, Calif., where he earned a full scholarship. In some ways, Abram has followed in the footsteps of his father, now a preacher in Port Arthur, Texas. But he has managed to avoid the mistakes of his father, who did time on death row before winning his release and becoming an ordained pastor.

Abram has shown the congregation what can be accomplished when a community invests in its young people — and when they give back. "God has given me the ability to reach many, and he's been speaking through me and allowed me to be dynamic," he said, sitting on the front porch of his Roseland home, facing the church. "It's not me bragging on myself. I'm astonished and amazed by the things God has done for me. Whether it's praying for someone and the power of God overcomes me or whether it's just preaching the word of God and so many people getting happy and encouraged because of it." Preaching has brought Abram closer to his father, he says. It also has given him a way to escape the dangers that surround him in Roseland. Although he rose to the rank of captain at the military academy, worked for the high school newspaper and graduated salutatorian Friday, the church gave Abram a place to belong in a way high school never did.

"It's a rough time for me," Abram said, referring to high school. "The place I really fit in is church because I serve a purpose. I serve a role. Preaching is a part of who I am." In 1982, Abram Sr., then 21, was convicted of capital murder for his role in the robbery of a convenience store where a teenage store clerk and customer were fatally shot. He got the death sentence, though someone else was convicted of pulling the trigger. He served 10 years, most of it on death row. But the murder conviction was thrown out, and he was released after agreeing to plead guilty to armed robbery. Having heeded the call to ministry while behind bars, he joined his sister in Chicago and accompanied her to church at Greater New Mount Eagle. There, he served as youth pastor and became ordained. That's when he met Paulette Cameron. Their relationship

Rev. Donald Abram, 17, a senior in high school, preaches a sermon at Greater New Mount Eagle Baptist Church in Chicago on May 27. Abram, a senior at Chicago Military Academy at Bronzeville, is a top-notch student and preacher. Next year, Abram will attend Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., where he earned a full scholarship.

eventually ended, but they maintained a bond: their son Donald Jr. The father moved on to several churches, eventually joining a church in Port Arthur, Texas, which he left in a dispute with congregants. He launched his own ministry: God 1st Missionary Baptist Church, where he now serves. Cameron has raised Donald and his three siblings as a single mom. After her relationship with Abram Sr. ended, she never went back to church, until it was time to support her son. Instead, Abram's grandmother Muriel Lawrence took him and his siblings to church every Sunday. Abram, a quiet child, preferred spending his time with the adults instead of other children. He became an usher and joined the choir. "My grandmother kept me in church. She made it mandatory," Abram said. "There came a point in my life where she wasn't making me go. I wanted to go because I had developed a relationship with Christ myself." When Abram was 14, he started having a dream. In the dream, he saw himself at church. But instead of sitting in the pews, he was standing in the pulpit. "I don't know how the Lord will come to you, Donald," his grandmother told him. "But when he does, you will know." Abram interpreted the dream as a call to preach and delivered his first sermon in December 2008. The Rev. Fredrick Wilson, senior pastor at Greater New Mount Eagle, keeps his eye on report cards and praises straight A's from the pulpit. So he already knew Abram as one of Lawrence's studious grandchildren when the teen came in one Sunday morning to tell him he wanted to preach. "We tell our children here ... 'You've got to start early getting your grades up,'" Wilson said. "If you do that, you'll write your own ticket. They'll call for you.' And that's what he's done." Established African-American preachers often don't give young aspiring ministers the spotlight, Wilson said, because they lack the life experience necessary to relate to people in the pews. But when he needs someone to put "a spark in things," he turns to Abram. "I took the position here that I'm going to put him up as many times as I possibly can because I think you learn by doing," he said. "I'll take him anywhere." The lack of life experience hasn't seemed to matter, Wilson said. More than once after Abram has preached, the pastor has watched people answer the call and approach the altar. "He gives them a reason for accepting Christ," he said. Abram said Wilson has been one of his harshest critics, and Wilson acknowledges that. He considers Abram his "spiritual son." "His presence with me is only temporary," Wilson said. "Therefore I'm preparing him for when I'm no longer around and he's no longer around, as all parents try to do for their children." Likewise, Cameron has made sure she instilled values and lessons to steer her son in the right direction once he lands in college on the West Coast. "Donald has so much to offer to other people, I have to sit back and accept that I have to share my son with the world," she said.
