Mount Marty College has spent the past weeks putting the finishing touches on this weekend's 75th anniversary celebration and all-school reunion, which begins today (Friday) on MMC's Yankton campus. Among the organizers are (left) Barb Rezac, Chief Advancement Officer; Shannon Viereck, Director of Annual Giving; Amy Heimes; Administrative Assistant to the Advancement office; and Wyatt Yager, Events and Ceremonies Coordinator.

"There's always a story to share and they're the heart of the college.

Viereck said having all new employees plan the event was both challenging and a great experience.

"There are certain things, if we had all been here a year or two more, that maybe we would have been able to do in addition to what we have planned," she said. "Maybe we would have done it differently, but because of a time crunch, we had to do things a certain way. It was nice to have new people in here though, because we had a lot of excitement for it since it's one of our new, big projects."

Yager said he is encouraging the community to participate in some of the events they have open to the public, such as Bingo on Friday night, a Sunrise Mass and the Mile Fun Walk on Saturday and the Alumni Mass on Sunday.

Rezac said she hopes these events will help the Yankton Community realize what they have in the college.

'Mount Marty is like a secret sometimes," she said. "We want to get the word out about the gem that this place is to the community. We always hear a lot of positive stories from the alumni about how their education has taken them places and how well-prepared they were.'

"The program is really set up for the multiple offender," Klimisch said. It's a person who has gone through all the treatment, all the steps, has served jail time and has maybe been to the penitentiary. It isn't for someone who has had one offense."

Frieberg said the discussion now is to meet on a weekly basis. The drug court team would convene in advance to discuss what has happened with the clients during the week

"After the team meets, we'll have the drug court," he stated. "The team goes into the courtroom, as well as all the participants, and we'll do one everyone in the courtroom being on the same page," Frieberg said. "You usually have your defense attorney saying, 'We want this.' You have your prosecutor saying, 'We want this.' Then the judge makes a decision.

"With this, you've got everybody on the same page," he continued.

"They are seeing a police officer, a prosecutor, a defense attorney, a probation officer, a treatment provider and a judge saying, 'You did a good job.' It's not the normal way court is handled. That, in itself, let's them realize, 'I'm not alone. There are some people who really do care.' I think that has a lot to do with the success of these courts.'

"They count on each other to do good," he said. "They don't want to disappoint the others.'

Participants can graduate to different phases as they show progress. Frieberg said it will take 18-24 months to complete the program.

Initially, participants will be required to have a job or be enrolled in school, take part in the 24/7 program, pay any fines or court fees, visit with their probation officer regularly and attend a community support group. During phase two, the demands become less onerous.

"By the time they get to the fourth phase, they are probably comare required, the judge could order immediate incarceration, loss of privileges or demotion. Repeated failures could result in being ousted from the program and turned over to the sentencing judge.

"It's a long process, and there are a lot of hoops they have to go through," Frieberg said. "If they get through all of that and are still sober and straight, they can graduate from the program. The goal is they don't go to the penitentiary where they are being paid for and instead become taxpayers."

THANK YOU

We want to thank all our friends and relatives for all the cards and best wishes, and for coming from near and far for our 40th wedding anniversary party.

We had a great time and had so much fun talking about the past 40 years.

We want to thank our children: Holly, Tom, Leyna and granddaughter Lillien for putting all this together.
