Poet Reminisces While At The Doctors Office

BY TED KOOSER

Lots of us find ourselves under the interested fingers of dermatologists, who prosper on the fun we once had out in the sun. Here George Bilgere of Ohio, one of our most amusing American poets, sits back in his skin doctor's chair and reminisces about a party that took place years ago.

BASAL CELL

The sun is still burning in my skin even though it set half-an-hour ago, and Cindy and Bob and Bev and John are pulling on their sweatshirts and gathering around the fire pit. John hands me a cold one and now Bev comes into my arms and I can feel the sun's heat, and taste the Pacific on her cheek. I am not in Vietnam, nor is John or Bob, because our deferments came through, and we get to remain boys for at least another summer like this one in Santa Cruz, surfing the afternoons in a sweet blue dream I'm remembering now, as the nurse puts my cheek to sleep, and the doctor begins to burn those summers away.

USD's Bachelor Degree In Nursing Gains Accreditation

VERMILLION — The University of South Dakota Department of Nursing has received formal notification from the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE) that the Baccalaureate in Nursing (B.S.N.) program at USD is accredited. USD has offered the R.N.-B.S.N. track since 2011 and will begin their first cohort of students in the four-year B.S.N. nursing major in Vermillion and Sioux Falls this fall with the Rapid City campus following in fall 2014. The Baccalaureate program earned accreditation through June 30, 2018, which is the longest time period for an initial accreditation.

Carla Dieter, Ed.D, R.N., F.N.P.-B.C., professor and chair of USD Nursing, noted that the accreditation couldn't come at a better time as more students are seeking opportunities for careers in one of the world's largest and fastest growing occupations, and the demand for baccalaureate nurses is at an all-time high and will continue to increase. The announcement was made by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education Board of Commissioners in April following an on-site evaluation in September 2012.

'Our USD Nursing Depart-

for increased access to advanced degrees in nursing to ensure that students are welleducated and prepared for increasingly complex health care needs throughout the state and region," stated Dieter. "By offering the B.S.N., we are providing a significant pathway for students to obtain education in nursing and meet the professional needs of workers looking to make a difference in health

The baccalaureate degree in nursing consists of 120 credits that include theory, laboratory and clinical learning experiences. Students have an opportunity to complete general education requirements and prerequisites the first two years of the program, and nursing courses the final two years. I coming freshman for the fall 2012 semester were able to declare the four-year B.S.N. as their degree thanks to authorization in the fall of 2011 by the South Dakota Board of Regents.

USD Nursing will maintain accreditation for the Associate Degree Nursing programming through the Accreditation Commission for Education in Nursing (ACEN), formerly known as the National League for Nursing Accrediting Commission

You Can't Claim A Public Parking Spot

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

King Features Syndicate

Dear Tom and Ray:
My question regards parking etiquette. Recently, a neighbor has been parking his car in front of our house on a daily/nightly basis. From what I can gather, this neighbor lives in a "group house" of about four individuals. Their driveway fits only two cars, and there's room for only one at the curb in front of the house. So, this neighbor has adopted my curb as his car's new home. While I am aware that it's technically a "public" street, this is, in my opinion, very rude — but more importantly, it's inconvenient. I have a single-lane driveway for both my car and my wife's car. I often travel to the airport and come home late at night, or have a need to travel to an early-morning meeting. So I have need to use my curb to park my car, on occasion. My car is a manual transmission, and my wife cannot drive a stick, so any movement of my car requires me to do it. As it stands, I often am forced to park down the street or around the corner from my own house. And I recently held a dinner party where my guests could not park in front of my house. We live in suburbia, not the city — everyone here has a driveway and plenty of room to park. At a minimum, it's unsightly and annoying, and very un-neighborly. I've left polite notes to this neighbor letting him know these facts, and in a recent note, I mentioned "I don't park my car in front of your house, so why do you park your car in front of mine?" Do you have any advice? —Duane

RAY: Yeah: Start by apologizing. It's not "technically" a public street, Duane. It IS a public street. So you have no right to claim it as private property.

TOM: Can you ask your neighbor, as a favor, to leave that spot open for you when possible? Sure. And if you have a neighborly relationship, and he has other reasonable options, he'll probably accommodate you. But you've started off the negotiations on the wrong foot by accusing him of behaving

RAY: When someone starts a conversation with you by saying, "Hey, jerk!" how open are you to helping the guy?

TOM: Now, we know, you say you started off politely. But you may think you're being more polite than you are. Saying "I don't do this rude thing to you, yet you do it to me' puts the other guy on the defensive. And since he has the law on his side, you've given up your most potent weapon: an appeal to his good nature and benevolence.

RAY: So here's what I'd do: Start over. Start by getting to know your neighbors. Nothing helps resolve a situation like seeing each other as actual human beings rather than "some jerk in a group house" or "some grouchy old guy who thinks he owns the street." Learn your neighbors' names, and find out what they do. Be neighborly first. You even might invite them over for a meal.

RAY: Don't listen to my brother. He's been hated in every neighborhood he's ever lived in. Once you have some kind of basic relationship established, then you'll be in a position to ask for a favor. That is, in fact, what you're asking for.

Tuesday, 6.4.13

TOM: And here's the secret: Most people LIKE doing favors for other people. It feels good to help another person. They just don't like being forced to accommodate other people. So ask really nicely. Explain that you know he has every right to park anywhere on the street. But say that because of your work and family situation, it really helps you a lot if you can park in front of your house, and you're wondering if he might do you a favor and leave that space open whenever it's not inconvenient for him.

RAY: And ask him if there's anything you can do for HIM in return. It's possible that this relationship has already been poisoned, and you're just going to have to live with the life-shortening effects of having a bad neighbor. But maybe you still can turn it around.

TOM: Understanding your position (that you need a favor from him) is an important starting point in any negotiation. Good luck,
