'Ford Tri-Motor Days' Proclaimed For Yankton

Mayor Nancy Wenande has proclaimed June 20-23 as "Ford Tri-Motor Days" in Yankton. The proclamation is in honor of the visit of a 1929 Ford Tri-Motor aircraft to Chan Gurney Airport as part of a Midwest tour by the vintage aircraft. The tour stop in Yankton is being sponsored in part by the Yankton Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) Chapter 1029, Yankton Regional Aviation Association (YRAA), and Country Ford (Tyndall).

The City of Yankton is also playing a key role in allowing the use of the city's large hangar with its 70-wide door to house the priceless aircraft overnight.

The aircraft will be on public display while on the ground at the airport. Aircraft rides will be available between 2-5 p.m. June 20, and 9 a.m-5 p.m. on June 21-23. Rides are available for a fee. For information about the visit to Yankton, contact Francis Serr at 605-660-4237 or fserr@vyn.midco.net weren't extensive in time.

To the east, Clay-Union Electric of Vermillion suffered a few outages, said member services/marketing director Mike

"We had about 30 members in the Wakonda area affected," he said. "The outages were lightning related, and that caused some minor equipment damage. Everyone was back on within $1 \frac{1}{2}$ hours.

Other rural-electric co-operatives were spared much impact from Saturday's storm.

Bon Homme-Yankton Electric general manager Merlin Goehring said his Tabor-based co-operative saw limited outages.

"We did not have any damage to the system from this storm,' he said. "(We) had just a couple outages Saturday morning, one fuse blown and the other a tree branch on a power line, so we got by this time, not like the April ice storm."

Further west, Charles Mix Electric member services director Russell Gall said his Lake Andes-based utility didn't experience any outages because of the storm.

Information wasn't immediately available from Southeastern Electric of Marion and Cedar-Knox Public Power District of Hartington, Neb.

No deaths or injuries were reported from Saturday's storm, but Glanzer urged the public to use caution in the aftermath of such weather events.

"Anytime you have a strong wind storm like that, you have to be careful, especially with overhead lines that can arch pretty easy," he said. "Lines can go through driving paths or walking paths. Anytime you see a downed line or a line that's hanging lower, treat it as if it's live. Never touch a power line."

Sometimes, the public mistakenly thinks a phone line is a cable line or doesn't realize that lines can become energized by touching other lines, Glanzer

"If a line lies in standing water, you don't know how far the current will run in the water. And never drive over downed power lines," he said.

When coming across downed NorthWestern lines, call 911 or the toll-free number of (800) 245-6977, Glanzer said.

"We take the safety of the community first," he said. "The best thing to do (when you come across downed lines) is wait until you have assurance from us. You have to treat all of this as if it presents an immediate danger to your well-being.'

Horse Trail Challenge Clinic Set For Norfolk

NORFOLK, Neb. — Arista Ranch, Norfolk, Neb., will be hosting a Trail Challenge Clinic on Saturday, June 22.

The Trail Challenge is focused on providing a safe and educational venue for horse and rider to navigate various obstacles and sometimes challenging trail situations that promote education, safety and fun. Preparing horse and rider to negotiate an obstacle with a degree of accuracy is an educational experience, and when it is undertaken and accomplished safely it becomes fun, and as a result riding becomes more pleasurable.

Featured clinician Larry Voecks, AQHA Recreational Advisor, will guide attendees through the process of training and approaching scenarios found on the trail, in addition to evaluating the terrain. During the clinic, natural obstacles and manmade obstacles may be used to build on the partnership and trust between horse and rider.

Space is limited to 15 horse and rider combinations, and is open to all breeds. Check-in and Registration is from 9-10 a.m. The session will begin with introduction to obstacles in the safety of the arena, and the afternoon sessions will be out on the trail. The clinic will conclude at 3 p.m., a lunch stand will be available on the grounds. Spectators are welcome, bring a chair; there is a fee for entry.

For more information, contact Jana Olsen, Arista Ranch at 402-992-0445 or Larry Voecks at 402-649-4474.

Expansion

at one time through its foster care program.

"The big problem we have right now is that we don't have a space to house dogs at all, so we have to rely on foster care," said Sheila Woodward, HHS board president. "We have wonderful volunteers who do foster care, but that's not something everyone is willing or able to do. We really need a spot where we can bring in dogs and keep them safe and make sure they are vaccinated before they are adopted.

Using the information provided from the study, HHS is considering construction of a new facility within Yankton city limits that would measure between 4,000 and 5,500 square feet, Schmidt said. This would provide enough space for approximately 20 to 25 dogs and 40 cats at one time, she said.

"We also want an area for the dogs to be able to exercise outside, so we'd need some additional outside space," Schmidt said. "I think the shelter could function on two to three acres.'

She said rough cost estimates for the new facility are currently between $500,000 and $750,000.

'We're a private organization, so that will have to come from individual and business donations,' Schmidt said. "We'll also be applying for grants to help out

In addition to limited shelter space, another factor causing HHS to seek expansion is the organization's continued growth. In the last two years, HHS has seen a 300 percent increase in total animal in-

Schmidt attributed the growth to increased public awareness about the services HHS provides.

The community has become more aware that we exist," she said. "I think historically there has been some confusion. There is a difference between animal control and the Yankton pound and Heartland Humane Society. I think we're finally breaking through some of those barriers, and we have been able to educate the public that we are here and this is what we do."

Schmidt said that HHS is currently working with city officials to see if that increased interest will translate into support for a new fa-

We're hoping we get green lights, and the community can realize this is a necessity for the future," she said.

To recognize the value of HHS' services, Schmidt said one only needs to consider the 175 animals from Yankton County that the shelter took in during 2012. "I look at it as, 'What if those 175 animals were still roaming the streets?" she asked. "It wouldn't be a community people would want to live in.

Schmidt said. It is also scouting possible locations for the new facility and investigating funding options, she said. Added Woodward, "We're excited and we hope we can raise the money and get it done. We have a Friday's activities begin with a memorial service and non-denomination church service in the morning. A special Czech Days stamp cancellation will be held at the post office on Friday morning only.

The parade will start at 1 p.m. in front of St. Wenceslaus Church led by 2013 Parade Marshals Doug and Claudette Sternhagen. No entry fee is charged for the sixblock parade, which starts at St. Wenceslaus Catholic Church and ends a block west of the bank.

"We will take entries right up to parade time. But anybody who just shows up Friday will be put at the end of the parade," Povondra said.

'The last I heard, we had 90some entries. The head of the parade said you can't imagine the number of extra calls received over the weekend from people who want to enter.'

Anyone wishing to enter the Czech Days Parade should contact Ken and Čolleen Sedlacek at (605) 661-2628 or (605) 661-0411. Parade entry forms may be downloaded from the Czech Days web site at www.taborczechdays.com.

The rest of Friday afternoon features the opening program with Jean Hunhoff and Matt Hunhoff as masters of ceremonies, dedication ceremonies to the late Vi Zdenek Povondra, a kolache baking demonstration (the only one during Czech Days) by Ann Beran and her assistants, and free concerts by Dick Zavodny and the Gregory Polka Band.

Friday evening activities at Sokol Park kick off with the Nase Mala Kapela concert and polka dance-off contest with Erin Sedlacek as master of ceremonies, Czech Days Queen talent contest and costume judging, and a free concert by the Tabor 1890 band. Sokol Park entertainment begins at 6:15 p.m. and will be pro-

The evening's Sokol Park activities will conclude with the 9 p.m. crowning of the 2013 Czech Days Queen. The Tabor 1890 Band will provide the music for the 9:30 p.m. coronation ball in Beseda Hall.

The Czech Heritage mini-village, Blachnik Museum and information center with Czech souvenirs will be open both days of the celebration. In addition, Sanford Health will conduct healthy heart screenings and a stop-smoking trailer by the fire hall both days.

Visitors can purchase meals at Beseda Hall, the Legion Hall, from the fire department and from local businesses.

And, of course, the ever-popular kolaches will be on sale, Povondra said. "The Altar Society at St. Wenceslaus Church makes kolaches, and the American Legion Auxiliary has also started kolache baking," he said. "At Beseda Hall, they sell around 2,000 dozen kolaches. At the Legion Hall, they sell kolaches individually.'

The huge influx of visitors during Czech Days provides a major year-round boost for the community, Povondra said.

That's what keeps our organizations going," he said. "You work hard for your celebration that's held for two days, and then (with the proceeds) we can continue to keep our programs going."
