Defensive coordinator Alan Williams said after minicamp practice Wednesday that Bishop went through a "good workout" with team officials. Williams deferred to general manager Rick Spielman and head coach Leslie Frazier about the possibility of signing the seventh-year veteran.

Bishop played in a 3-4 defense with Green Bay. Minnesota uses a 4-3 scheme. But Williams said he doesn't believe there'd be much of an adjustment if Bishop were to join the Vikings.

The Packers released Bishop on Monday. He started at inside linebacker for two years before tearing his hamstring during an exhibition game, an injury that kept him out for the entire 2012 season. pitched a four-hitter and struck out 11 and Oregon State made a fourth-inning sacrifice fly stand for a 1-0 victory over Indiana in the College World

The Hoosiers (49-16) went 1-2 in their first CWS appearance. Indiana's Aaron Slegers allowed seven hits in his first career complete game. Boyd, who pitched his fourth complete game and third shutout this season, faced the minimum through four innings. He held the Hoosiers hitless until Michael Basil looped a ball into short right field in the fifth.

The Beavers scored in the fourth when Kavin Keyes singled, went to third on Rvan Barnes' double and came home on Jake Rodriguez's sacrifice fly to right.

A Title, And Legacies, On The Line For Heat, Spurs

MIAMI (AP) — Game 7s do more than settle championships. They define legacies

No matter what happens Thursday night, LeBron James and the Miami Heat, and Tim Duncan's San Antonio Spurs have already won NBA titles and secured a place in

The truly memorable teams won the hard way, and that will be the case for the one celebrating at center court this time. It's either a Heat repeat, possible only after James led them back from what seemed certain elimination in the closing seconds of Game 6, or the Spurs shaking off as gut-wrenching a loss as a team can have to become just the fourth club to win a Game 7 of the NBA Finals on the

"As a competitor you love it, because you know you have an opportunity and it's up to you," Heat guard Ray Allen said. "We have a chance in our building to make something great. All of our legacies are tied to this moment, this game. It's something our kids will be able to talk about that they were a part of. Forever will remember these moments, so we want to not live and have any regrets.'

Allen played in the game the last time the NBA's season went down to the very last day, the Boston Celtics fading at the finish and falling 83-79 to the Los Angeles Lakers in 2010. That made home teams 14-3 in finals Game 7s, with no road team winning since Washington beat Seattle in 1978. Overcoming those odds, not to mention the NBA's winningest team, would make this more memorable than the Spurs' previous four titles, though this is a franchise that never dwells too much on the past or looks too far into the future.

'You know what, it's all about just winning the title. It's not about situation or what has led up to it," Duncan said. "It's a great story for everybody else, but we're here for one reason, one reason only: It's to try to win this game (Thursday). We have had a very good season thus far, and I think we just want to get to the game more than anything. We just want to see what happens and be able to leave

But playing for titles is more expected than celebrated now in Miami, and a 66-win season that included a 27-game winning streak and perhaps the whole Big Three era — goes down as a failure if the Heat fall Thursday. Yet James said he doesn't need the victory to validate his decision to take his talents to South Beach.

"I mean, I need it because I want it and I only came here — my only goal is to win championships," he said. "I said it, this is what I came here for. This is what I wanted to be a part of this team for.'

He, Wade and Bosh are going for No. 2, while San Antonio is getting a second shot at what would be a fourth together for Duncan, Tony Parker and Manu Ginobili. All their years together have given the Spurs' trio the belief they can bounce back from Tuesday's col-

"We just have to be positive and forget Game 6," Parker said. "It was a great opportunity, but that's life.

So will James, who was planning when it's over he'll be either a twotime NBA Finals MVP or a two-time

"I want to go down as one of the greatest. I want our team to go down as one of the greatest teams. And we have an opportunity to do that," James said. "Hasn't been many teams to win back-to-back championships. It's so hard. It's the hardest thing. I said last year it was the hardest thing I've ever done, winning my first. Last year don't even come close to what we've gone through in this postseason and in these finals.

'So I'll be there (Thursday) night. I'm going to give it my all."

The Spurs have never lost in the finals, but they've never faced a situation quite like this. They won a Game 7 for the 2005 championship, but that victory over Detroit was at home. The last five finals that went the distance all went to the home

For all the discomfort, monotony and doubt Peterson had to fend off during his rehab, the scariest moment of 2012 came at training camp after finishing off a meal of his favorite foods.

'We had gumbo, so I was very excited. Had a couple bowls. Got back to my room to rest up, and about 10 minutes later I started experiencing some of the symptoms: itchy eyes, swollen throat," Peterson said, adding: "I'm always thinking that I'm superhuman, and there's nothing really that can affect me, but when that came about, it happened so fast. My throat started to close so fast, and my eyes started swelling. I knew not to panic, but I was getting kind of anxious.'

Fortunately, head athletic trainer Eric Sugarman was a phone call and a few minutes away. He brought team physician Dr. Joel Boyd and the epinephrine, and Peterson immediately improved. He was taken to the hospital as a precaution. Anaphylaxsis was the diagnosis, and now Peterson carries two EpiPens with him wherever he goes. Sugarman's staff keeps the injectors on the sideline and in the training room, too.

"He just wants to make sure I have something to do," Sugarman said, smiling.
