Resentment For The Family Loan

BY DAVE RAMSEY

Dear Dave,
I borrowed $30,000 from my aunt to buy a condo eight years ago. We had a deal that she would get her money back, plus a piece of the profits, when it sold. If there were no profits, she would get back her original $30,000. Recently the condo sold and I lost the money I put into it, plus my aunt's money as well. I make good money and don't have any other debt, but I'm a little resentful now that she wants me to pay her back. Do you have any suggestions? —Christine

Dear Christine,
I don't want to be mean, but you have no right to be resentful toward your aunt. This is the deal you signed up for, and she did nothing wrong. Wanting her money back now isn't greedy or malicious on her part, and it's definitely not worth putting a family relationship at risk.

I know what you're thinking, because it's just human nature. You just went through a lot, and the situation didn't work out as planned. Plus, it doesn't sound like your aunt is hurting financially if she put $30,000 toward helping you in the deal. Part of you is thinking she has plenty of money, so why doesn't she just forgive the debt and forget about everything?

Dave

quickly as possible, and get this bad deal behind you for good. You said you make good money, so just take care of your responsibility. It'll hurt some, but it's better than taking a chance on ruining the relationship with a very generous and loving aunt. —Dave

Dear Dave,
I'm working on my debt snowball, and I'm trying to settle with a pushy collector. I don't have the $9,000 I owe, but I have $3,000 I'd like to offer as a settlement. Recently the collector has started asking for a lot of information I don't feel comfortable providing. What should I do? —Daniel

If you were barely scraping by, I might suggest that you sit down and talk with her over a cup of coffee, explain the situation and ask her to forgive the debt. Right now, the little girl part of you is whining, "Oh, come on. Just let me go!" But the grown-up Christine knows better. That part of you is whispering, "You know what to do..."

Pay her back as quickly as possible, and get this bad deal behind you for good. You said you make good money, so just take care of your responsibility. It'll hurt some, but it's better than taking a chance on ruining the relationship with a very generous and loving aunt. —Dave

Dear Daniel,

Lots of times in these kinds of situations collectors are trying to gather up as much information as possible in order to sue you. Even if that's not the case here, there's no reason for you to be supplying them with a bunch of extra info. Just offer them the $3,000, and make it clear that your financial coach—which is me—told you not to answer any more of their nosy questions.

Make sure they understand that your offer of $3,000 stands as a settlement of the debt today. If they're willing to accept the offer, get a statement in writing saying that the $3,000 represents payment in full before you cut the check. If they choose not to accept your offer, and they keep asking questions that are none of their business, just tell them to call back when they're willing to discuss terms. Then, hang up! —Dave

Keep Summer Gatherings Food Poisoning Free

PIERRE — Food poisoning can spoil summer picnics and cookouts but simple precautions can prevent it, says a state health official.

"Bacteria in food multiply faster whenever temperatures rise above 40 F," said Bill Chalcraft, health protection administrator for the Department of Health. "That's why handling and storing food safely is so important during hot weather."

In 2012, South Dakota reported 493 cases of the food-borne illnesses E. coli, Salmonella, and Campylobacter.

To date in 2013, 157 cases of such illnesses have been reported. Food-borne illnesses often go unreported so the actual number of cases is likely higher.

Mild or severe diarrhea, fever, vomiting and abdominal pain are common symptoms of food-borne illness. Most people will recover at home without medication but some people may need fluids to prevent dehydration.

Chalcraft recommended the following steps when cooking outdoors:

- Start with hand-washing. Use moist disposable towelettes if soap and water aren't available.
- Keep raw foods separate from cooked foods. If a plate held raw meat, don't use it again without first washing it in hot, soapy water.
- Marinate foods in the refrigerator, not on the counter or outdoors, and don't reuse marinade. For use as a sauce, set some aside before adding food.
- Use a food thermometer to make sure food is cooked thoroughly. Cook hamburgers to 160 F and chicken to at least 165 F.

- Keep hot food hot (140 F or above) and cold food cold (40 F or below).
- Refrigerate or freeze leftover food promptly. Don't let perishable foods sit out longer than two hours; no more than one hour if temperatures are above 90 F.

Soil Presentation Slated For Vermillion

VERMILLION — A discussion on "Ancient Soils and Modern Science: How Not To Treat Your Soil Like Dirt" with Dean Spader will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 27, at the Edith B. Siegrist Vermillion Public Library's Community Room. The library is located at 18 Church Street.

Numerous scientific disciplines using electron microscopy are discovering why "many modern agricultural and urban landscapes mean dead dirt." The questions then arise: What is killing our soil? Why is dead soil so compacted with hardpan, and why does it erode so easily? Why are certain weeds and pests taking over? If we want to reverse these trends, how do we restore life to our dead soil? The same science is beginning to provide answers to these questions. This presentation will offer two forms of soil management and suggests that one is better for our lawn, garden, and farm soils. Use of this method also produces nutritious, healthy, and delicious food for our consumption.

For more information on this free event, contact Patti Roberts-Pizzuto at (605) 677-7060 or pizzuto@sdln.net, or visit www.vermillionpubliclibrary.org/.
