Obama: Child Migrants Are 'Urgent' Issue

BY ALICIA A. CALDWELL AND CHRISTOPHER SHERMAN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama on Monday described a surge in unaccompanied immigrant children caught trying to cross the Mexican border as an "urgent humanitarian situation," as the White House asked Congress for an extra $1.4 billion in federal money to cope. Obama said the U.S. will temporarily house the children at two military bases.

Obama appointed the head of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Craig Fugate, to be in charge of the situation. In its new estimates, the government said as many as 60,000 children, mostly from Central America, could be caught this year trying to cross the Mexican border illegally, costing the U.S. more than $2.28 billion to house, feed and transport the children to shelters or reunite them with relatives already living in the United States. The new estimate is about $1.4 billion more than the government asked for in Obama's budget request sent to Congress earlier this year.

In the last eight months alone, 47,000 children have been apprehended at the Southwest Border.

Obama described the growing humanitarian issue at the border in a presidential memorandum Monday that outlined a government-wide response led by Fugate.

Obama's director of domestic policy, Cecilia Munoz, said the number of children traveling alone has been on the rise since 2009, but the increase was larger than last year. Munoz said the group also now includes more girls and larger numbers of children younger than 13.

"All of these things are contributing to the sense of urgency," Munoz said. "These are children who have gone through a harrowing experience alone. We're providing for their proper care."

The growth has surpassed the system's capacity to process and house the children. Last month, the federal government opened an emergency operations center at a border headquarters in South Texas to help coordinate the efforts and the Office of Refugee Resettlement, a division of the Health and Human Services Department, turned to the Defense Department for the second time since 2012 to help house children in barracks at Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio.

"We've been sending out letters to representatives, businesses and anything of the like," she said. "We also did an ice cream sundae fundraiser at my school."

So far, Harper has raised around $400.

Joining her will be Irene-Wakonda teacher and FCCLA advisor Jill Metheny. The fundraising goal is to raise around $2,000 to help pay for both Metheny and Harper.

Metheny said her first year of being an advisor has been quite an experience.

"I'm kind of learning as I go," Metheny said. "It's been awesome, a little crazy and a little frightening all at the same time."

On having a student go in her first year of teaching, Metheny said it's a testament to how hard Harper worked.

"South Dakota is incredibly highly competitive at the state level," she said. "To have somebody my first year who won and did an outstanding job is great."

The last time Irene-Wakonda sent a contingent to the national competition was 2009.

Harper said she will be competing in an individual event known as "Recycle and Redesign" at nationals.

"I take things that are old, reuse them to make a new sort of product and then I figure out how to market it," she said.

For her state-winning entry, Harper designed a cell phone case using a belt buckle and old curtains.

Anyone interested in helping with fundraising may send monetary donations to the Irene-Wakonda School District at PO Box 5, Irene, SD, 57037. A school auction is planned for August to help offset additional costs for the trip.
