Braves' Floyd Breaks Bone In Elbow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atlanta Braves right-hander Gavin Floyd has a broken bone his throwing elbow.

The Braves said that Floyd broke the olecranon in his right arm during Thursday night's 3-0 victory over the Washington Nationals. Floyd will return to Atlanta on Friday to be examined by team doctors and to determine how long he will be sidelined. Floyd flexed his pitching arm awkwardly after giving up a long foul ball to Jayson Werth on the first pitch of the seventh inning. Floyd then left the game for reliever Anthony Varvaro. Floyd was making his ninth start since returning from Tommy John surgery, but manager Fredi Gonzalez said the two injuries are not related. The Braves lost two starters — Kris Medlen and Brandon Beachy — to Tommy John surgery during spring training.

Stadium Sponsor Stays Neutral In Debate Over Redskins Name

WASHINGTON (AP) — The company most associated with the Washington Redskins is keeping its distance from the debate over the team's name. FedEx has its name on the Redskins' stadium, and its president is a member of the team's ownership group. But the company is remaining neutral on owner Dan Snyder's efforts to keep the name. Spokesman Patrick Fitzgerald said Thursday it's not FedEx's place to have a position. FedEx President Fred Smith told CNBC that his personal feelings about the name will "remain

Multiple sclerosis (MS) is a widespread and debilitating disease, which attacks the central nervous system. It affects millions of people worldwide and, at present, has no cure. The National MS Society addresses the challenges of each person affected by MS by funding research, promoting advocacy, facilitating education, collaborating with MS organizations around the world, and providing programs and services for people with MS and their families. The boot camp is designed to help roller derby players improve their blocking, speed and footwork. There is a cost to participate, which includes lunch.

Afterward, attendees will participate in a mixer where they will be matched up against skaters of comparable skill in a series of roller derby bouts. Spectators will get a triple-dose of roller derby beginning at

Texas Aide Savors Hollingsworth, Kershaw Outings

Skip Johnson's pupils aid him proud on the same night

A couple hours after Chad Hollingsworth held UC Irvine to four hits in a win Wednesday that kept Texas alive in the College World Series, the Los Angeles Dodgers' Clayton Kershaw finished the first nohitter of his career against the Colorado Rockies.

"I think that probably was one of his best days in a while," Hollingsworth said Thursday, referring to the Longhorns' pitching coach.

Kershaw began taking pitching lessons from Johnson when he was a high school senior in Dallas, and he continues to work with Johnson in Austin each offseason. Kershaw signed a $215 million, seven-year contract this past offseason. He pays Johnson nothing for his services. Johnson probably wouldn't accept money from Kershaw even if he offered. "Coach (Augie) Garrido says it best," Johnson said, "that what you're in it for is the relationships, and you see that you played a part in his life — a structured plan that I've set him with, and God did the rest. His ability is God-given, and his humility is above and beyond."

Hollingsworth said he sees Kershaw around the Longhorns' baseball facilities often and appreciates that Johnson treats every pitcher

"He's going to work just as hard with you as he does with Kershaw," Hollingsworth said. "It's nice to see that. He doesn't give up on any guy.

START WITH SBORZ: It's not lip service when Virginia coach Brian O'Connor says he trusts Josh Sborz. He was O'Connor's No. 2 starter for most of the season but was sent to the bullpen for the Cavaliers' last ACC series and conference tournament, with O'Connor brought Sborz back as a starter for the NCAA tournament, and the sophomore pitched seven shutout innings in the super regional-clinching win over Maryland. He'll be on the mound Friday in Virginia's bracket final.

'We've always tweaked things as it has come toward the end of the season and went with the hot hand," O'-Connor said, referring to Lewicki. "So there are a couple weeks that he got the short end of it, but I think he handled it like a champion, like a team guy, and kept waiting for his opportunity. Wouldn't you know it? He got a chance to pitch us to Omaha, and now he's going to have a chance to pitch and put his team into the national championship series.'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two the same, be it Kershaw or a Texas used Travis Duke as its oser against UC irvine oi Wednesday because John Curtiss came down with stomach flu before the game. Duke got the last two outs for his second save of the CWS. "I call him 'Denny the Rodeo Clown' because he's not afraid of the bull," pitching coach Skip Johnson said in a nod to the famous clown on the pro rodeo circuit. "He's not afraid of failing. There are going to be failures in this game and he goes out and attacks it. That's a beautiful thing about him.'

Curtiss, who has nine saves, should be available to pitch Friday against Vanderbilt.

KEEPING IT IN PERSPEC-TIVE: UC Irvine coach Mike Gillespie was ready to move on emotionally after his team was eliminated. "You get a little perspective when you stop to think about what's gone on in this part of the area outside of Omaha called Pilger, and you realize the town has been leveled, and then you know what real loss is," Gillespie said. "So we think about those people, and our hearts go out to those people."

Two people died and much of Pilger, about 100 miles northwest of Omaha, was destroyed by a tornado Monday.

Right behind was Wie, who studied as hard for Pinehurst as she ever did at Stanford. She was at Pinehurst on Sunday to watch the final round, and later picked up the yardage books from a few friends in south Florida — U.S. Open runner-up Rickie Fowler and Keegan Bradley — and compared notes.

Wie charted her way to four birdies on the back nine "I did a lot of homework," she said. "Just took the notes from both of the books. It really helped just because they played last week in similar

Lewis Holds 1-Shot Lead Over Wie In Women's Open makes it very exciting.'

The show belonged to Lucy Li, the 11-year-old from the Bay Area who became the youngest qualifier in U.S. Women's Open history. She missed only one fairway and was rarely out of position, though it cost the sixthgrader dearly when she was. Li made one triple bogey and two double bogeys, three blemishes on her card that led to a 78. "I mean, it's 8 over," Li said. "It's not bad. But I was 7 over in three holes, so that's 1 over in 15 holes. So yeah, I just need to get rid of the big numbers.' There were plenty of those to go around. At least 17 players failed to break 80, including Laura Davies. She had an 82, her worst score in a Women's Open since Cherry Hills in 2005. Perhaps more shocking was Lydia Ko, Cristie Kerr and defending champion Inbee Park, each of them at 76.

Karrie Webb and Paula

Creamer were at 70. Juli

Inkster, at 53 and playing in the Women's Open for the 35th time, had a 71. "I don't think the course is on the edge at all," Webb said. "I think the USGA had to be a little bit cautious. We haven't played a tournament here with this course setup before, and it is the second week. So I think they're probably trying to see how the course is playing, just to see where they're at with the golf course. I think they were just sort of seeing how we handled it.'
