all-league honor. He was the 2015 Summit League pole vault champion with a jump of 16-4. Sarehkhani's career-best mark of 17-1 at the Dakota Duals this spring qualified him for the NCAA West Preliminaries. Sarehkhani graduated with a bachelor's degree in communication studies and psychology, with a cumulative grade point average of 3.57.

Wetzstein earns a spot on her fifth consecutive Academic All-Summit League team. She earned all-league honors in both the 800 and 1,500 meters. Wetzstein clocked a new career best of 2:10.64 to finish runnerup in the 800 meters. She also placed third in the 1,500 meters with a time of 4:25.52. Earlier this spring, she broke the school record for 1.500 meters by clocking 4:22.62. The time qualified her for the NCAA West Preliminaries. Wetzstein carries a 3.91 grade point average with a major in medical biology.

was changed a year later, she also represented Team USA in Ogden. Utah in 2009.

The age divisions were then modified between 2009 and the 2011 WAYC in Poland, meaning the Cadet division would be ages 15-17 and Juniors division 18-20.

Pearce then qualified for the 2011 tournament and the 2013 WAYC in China, and did the same again earlier this year – meaning she would own the record for a fifth appearance.

Out of all those international locations, Turkey is the one that stands out the most, Pearce said.

'Tournament wise, I remember, being shocked by how many people were there," she said.

Not only has Pearce qualified that many times, she's helped Team USA capture four team gold medals, and also won the individual gold

The pursuit of team and individual glory in the WAYC can present what Pearce calls a 'different dynamic.' Why? The tournament has individual elimination days, where you could be competing against an archer from your country, but then the next day you could both be chasing the team title.

"Then you get there and you're trying to beat them, but you still want them to shoot well," Pearce said.

This year's event, for example, has a qualification round for recurve and compound on Tuesday, followed by individual eliminations on Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday is a mixed team and individual elimination day, while Saturday and Sunday are the finals.

"It's a very different dynamic," Pearce said. "That's the biggest difference, and it's something you can't prepare for. It's a different mindset.

Pearce is one of 23 archers to represent Team USA, across eight divisions - she will compete in the Compound Junior Women division along with Emily Fischer and Danielle Reynolds.

Even getting to the point where she could qualify was a challenge in itself, Pearce said, because of this country's quality depth in the sport.

"I have a feeling that in some of those other countries, maybe the top eight isn't as close," Pearce said. "With us, you could win or lose to anyone in the eight on any given day.'

Although the United States has been one of the top countries internationally in compound shooting, a number of other countries like Mexico, Colombia, Russia and Korea have stepped up their game, Pearce said.

"Each time I've gone, it's gotten progressively harder," she said. "Some of those other countries have put more effort into their compound teams.

As the United States gets ready to pursue another team gold, its 24 archers do have the advantage of competing in their home country, Pearce said, which means less travel and less jet lag. "Traveling overseas takes a lot out of you and it takes you a while to recover," she said. The other side of that port them because they're always supporting us," he said Wednesday.

Minnehaha County (Sioux Falls) naturally boasts the largest number of SDSU graduates, followed by Brookings County and Pennington County (Rapid City), according to the Alumni Association.

Although Yankton County ranks 12th on that list, the passion far out-weighs any number, Costello said.

'When you look at the Yankton Jacks, we always say it's probably the most active group we have," he said. "The Sioux Empire Staters is obviously much larger, but this is a very active and very vocal group.'

And not only vocal when hosting a golf outing, but vocal when they attend games. "That's what you want, whether we're at Coughlin or out in Montana, they're either there or they're by their radios," Stiegelmeier said.

As a kind of reward for that support, SDSU has made an effort to bring as many coaches as possible to events like the Jackrabbit Club golf outing, according to Costello.

"Getting our coaches in front of our fans at any time. is important, but especially in a situation like this where it's pretty relaxed," he said. "Our coaches are very accessible, and people can approach them at any point.

To that end, Stiegelmeier and Nagy were far from the only coaches in attendance Wednesday.

Nagy's coaching staff of Rob Klinkefus, Joe Krabbenhoft, Brian Cooley and Clint Sargent also golfed, as did head golf coach Casey Van-Damme - who just completed his first season. Prior to coming to SDSU, VanDamme spent the previous seasons at the University of Tennessee, which understandably boasts a fanbase much larger than that of SDSU.
