NBC Removes Williams From 'Nightly News'

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC said Thursday that Brian Williams will not return to his job as "Nightly News" anchor following his suspension for misrepresenting himself, but will be given a second chance with the company as a breaking news anchor at the cable network MSNBC.

Williams said he was sorry for saying things that weren't true, apologized to colleagues and viewers, and said that "I'm determined to earn back their trust."

Lester Holt, who has been subbing for Williams since his suspension in February, will officially take over as anchor at "Nightly News," the network said.

Williams was suspended in February for falsely claiming he had been in a helicopter hit by enemy fire during the Iraq War. NBC launched an internal investigation that found Williams "made a number of inaccurate statements about his own role and experiences covering events in the field." Most of them were not on NBC News, but on talk shows or in public appearances.

He'll begin an attempt to rehabilitate his reputation on Friday in an interview that he has already recorded with colleague Matt Lauer, to be shown on the "Today" show and "Nightly News." NBC, which had signed

Williams to a new five-year contract last fall, had been negotiating his new role over the past few weeks. Network executives didn't immediately make themselves available to explain what led them to believe he could not continue on "Nightly News," where he had reigned as television's most popular news anchor since 2004.

"As you would imagine this was a difficult decision," said Steve Burke, CEO of NBC Universal, in a statement. "Brian Williams has been with NBC News for a very long time and he has covered countless news events with honor and skill. As I said in February, we believe in second chances, and I am hopeful that this new beginning will be good for Brian and the organization."

BACK YARD RETREAT

When renovating their back yard, the Stoebners decided to leave a mature maple tree. It provides cool shade over their new spacious raised patio. Their back yard is rectangular. Curved patio and wide border flowerbeds balance the linear privacy fence. Outdoor table and chairs expand their living area and back yard windows allow them to enjoy the yard

One thing leads to another in yard renovations. Challenges can be opportunities.

"We poured the patio and I put the roof downspout under the concrete. I needed somewhere for the rain to go," Allen says, "So Leonard Gollnick and Laura of Nature Scaping Designs created the small stream and pond. Laura provides several fish yearly for the pond giving it some entertainment and feeding responsibilities for our grandchildren when visiting.

The water interest features a brook with water that rip-ples over stones. Its shape conforms with the patio and flows to a small pond. Fish have natural hiding places there. Water's edge plants and fieldstones add to the natural appearance of the water feature. Stoebners can enjoy the water on the patio and hear the sound of water indoors.

A back yard with some areas of full or partial shade turned into plant opportunities for Arlene. Hostas grow well in shade and partial shade. Bunnies enjoy eating hostas but the enclosed yard helps keep them out. "We purchased four or five hostas years ago. Rest you see here are transplants from the originals. I love them because they are colorful all season. Now they're brothers and sisters," Arlene says.

Several back yard flowerbeds have large clusters of hostas. Some varieties are large green leafed and some have variegated leaves. Some are near the pond. Many shades of green color and texture blend with accent flowers around the yard. Dozens of hostas in each cluster curve around the yard.

Arlene's Tip: (To harvest hostas to transplant) "I find a hosta that needs to be less crowded. I use a spade and take out the new plant and its roots. I plant transplants about three feet apart. Before long the space fills in. Hostas receive irrigation along with lawn grass. They get periodic Miracle-Gro fertilizer and slug pesticide as needed."

SIDE YARD COOPERATION

Side yards in city lots are often narrow and difficult to landscape, yet are necessary for transitions from front to back. As Stoebners upgraded other parts of the vard they agreed to rock mulch both sides of their sidewalk to the back yard. Now neighbors share the space that lead to both back fenced yards. The space complements both homes. Neighbor on the other side has noticed the Stoebners' manicured yard and compares notes on yard upgrades. As a couple working to add to the beauty of the yard, Allen enjoys the whole picture of the yard and does yard work to keep the yard looking sharp. Arlene likes color and new plants that contribute to the yard. She's a willing worker but says that Allen digs the holes. We are standing by an ice plant in a mounted birdcage.

"I saw the idea on Pinterest and ran across a birdcage at a yard sale," Arlene says. "Ice plant drapes and is a sun loving plant." She's giving the bright flowered plant a try. Yard work is one of my hobbies," Allen says. "When our daughter Alison was in sixth or seventh grade, we heard our church wanted someone to mow the lawn. Alison wanted to earn some money so I bought her a mower. About three years later she grew out of that job, so dad took over fifteen years ago.' Since taking over the church's yard care, Ärlene and Allen have provided plants and shrubs for that yard. Many are from their own yard.

and Gardens. You're invited to bring your friends on the self-guided tour that begins at 1905 Green Street. From Hy-Vee Food Store, go west on 21st and turn south on Green Street.

Tickets will be sold at the first stop between 9-11 a.m., so you'll start the tour by then. Garden tour includes six stops around Yankton and a salad and dessert luncheon. Plant sale will occur at the luncheon site.

Missouri Valley Master Gardeners are sponsors of this eighth annual tour. Homeowner hosts and master gardener volunteers will be available at tour stops for questions.

"We appreciate that Yankton Press & Dakotan shares this information with the public," says Kathy Jorgensen, master gardener tour committee chair. "First stop is on land that formerly was a peony test plot for Gurney Seed & Nursery many years ago."

"We're glad Stoebners are included on the tour because of their great yard and we have seen them interested in other yard tours in past years," Jorgensen says.

Fairy gardens and other creative garden décor, outdoor rooms, renovated outbuildings, several water features, a vegetable garden, flowerbeds, and a variety of yard design will be on the tour. Refer to "Missouri Valley Master Gardener" Facebook page for more information or call 605-660-4736.

'This summer our master gardeners are volunteering at the Yankton community gardens. Some master gardeners and 4-H Junior Leaders refurbished the John and Stella Goeken 4-H Memorial Garden at the Yankton County 4-H on Whiting Drive. Others have volunteer projects around the area," Jorgensen says. All are welcome on the garden tour.
