unable to find jobs as the nation's economy recovers slowly, and it extends extra federal Medicaid help to states for six more months.

The federal government pays roughly two-thirds of the cost of Medicaid, with the state picking up the rest.

Dilges said last year's stimulus measure increased the federal share of Medicaid funding through Dec. 31, 2010, to help states deal with budget problems. The bill passed by the U.S. Senate would extend the extra federal funding for Medicaid through June 30, 2011, providing South Dakota with an extra $28.8 million, he said.

South Dakota also is getting an additional $6.7 million in federal money tied to a calculation of how much the jobless rate increased during the recession. State officials learned recently that South Dakota would receive an additional $6.5 million in federal funds as part of a change in prescription drug coverage for people in both Medicaid and Medicare.

In all, South Dakota could get $42 million in extra federal money, which would save an equal amount of state funds.
