Why Do Odometers Never Lose Their Data?

BY TOM AND RAY MAGLIOZZI

Dear Tom and Ray:

Everyone knows it is illegal to change an odometer reading, and I wouldn't do it even if I knew how. My 1999 Chevy Malibu (the best car I've ever owned) has an electronic display. I am curious as to why the odometer data is not lost when the car battery is removed. On the electronic clocks I have, if the power is disconnected, you have to reset the clock when power is restored. I'm sure many of your readers are wondering about this also. An "expert" told me there is a small battery backup in the circuit. But what if the car were put in storage for months and this battery eventually failed? Thanks. — John TOM: Great question, John. Electronic odometers are not the same as electronic clocks. If they were, every used car you ever bought would have an odometer flashing 12:00!

RAY: They actually work like computer drives, which store data magnetically. If you turn off your computer and put it in your basement for years, when you start it up again, all of the stuff on your hard drive will still be there.

TOM: So guys, remember that! Anything you don't want discovered after you're dead, be sure to delete before shutting down your old computer!

RAY: Yeah. It took my brother a day and a half just to delete all of his "GMCs Gone Wild" videos.

TOM: The advantage of magnetic media is that they store data without power. The data are "imprinted" on the drive as a series of magnetic flux patterns.

RAY: And as long as you don't park next to Bernie's Dry Cleaning and Industrial De-Magnetizing Emporium, that data will remain there indefinitely.

What's the best way to warm up your engine in the morning? Find out by ordering Tom and Ray's pamphlet "Ten Ways You May Be Ruining Your Car Without Even Knowing It!" Send $4.75 (check or money order) to Ruin, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Private Well Owners: Check For Water Contamination

Extension Service: Flooding Can Threaten Your Water Supply

BROOKINGS — Flooding in eastern South Dakota could impact the water in privately owned wells.

That's according to South Dakota Cooperative Extension Water Management Engineer Christopher Hay, who said owners should be aware of the risks of water contamination that flooding poses.

"Floodwaters often carry hazardous or toxic materials, including bacteria, viruses, other pathogens, petroleum products, pesticides, and other chemicals," said Hay. "Wells that have been partially or fully submerged by flood waters can become contaminated with these materials, and drinking or washing with water from a private well that has flooded exposes people to risk of disease."

"Wells that have been partially or fully submerged by flood waters can become contaminated with these materials, and drinking or washing with water from a private well that has flooded exposes people to risk of disease."

CHRISTOPHER HAY

Hay said that if your well has been flooded, the well should be disinfected to remove bacteria once the floodwaters recede.

"It should then be tested to ensure it is safe, and if testing is delayed, the water should be boiled for at least 1 minute at a full rolling boil to temporarily treat it until testing and disinfecting are completed," Hay said. "Household water treatment systems will not provide enough protection and will also need to be disinfected."

Hay said well owners should inspect their wells prior to disinfection.

"First, make sure the electricity to the pump is turned off and that the electrical system is completely dry," said Hay. "Any damage should be repaired by a qualified electrician, well contractor, or pump contractor."

If the well cap is off or the well casing is damaged, large amounts of sediment and other debris may have entered the well. In that case, Hay said, owners should call certified well contractors to inspect wells.

"If the well cap is still on the well and not damaged, remove it and examine the inside of the well for damage," said Hay. "If the inside of the well casing is clean and there is no damage to the wiring, pump, or piping, the well can be disinfected using shock chlorination."

Shock chlorination is relatively easy and can be done by the well owner, but Hay said owners may prefer to have a well contractor complete the disinfection.

"Instructions on shock chlorination and links to more information can be found at the South Dakota Water Resources Institute Web site," Hay said. That Web site is available at this link: http://wri.sdstate.edu/flooding.cfm. Or ask for the information, available on DVD, at your county Extension office.

The South Dakota Cooperative Extension Service flooding Web site also has the information. That site is available at this link: http://sdces.sdstate.edu/flood/.

Hay said that after the shock chlorination treatment, owners should collect a water sample and have it tested for bacteria. Sample bottles can be obtained from your county Extension office or at the South Dakota Water Resources Institute on the campus of South Dakota State University in Brookings.

Two follow-up tests, one after two weeks and another after three months, will ensure that the well has been completely disinfected.

The South Dakota Water Resources Institute can answer questions about other possible contaminants. To reach the office, call 605-688-4910.

Additional information on collecting and submitting water samples can be found at the Water Resources Institute's Web site: http://wri.sdstate.edu/collecting_submitting.cfm.

Sandra Brown (standing) and Sister Evangeline Anderson display some of the books recently gifted to the Mount Marty College Library.

Mount Marty Library Gifted With Book Collection

The Mount Marty College Library is now showcasing a special collection of books that were recently given to the college.

Richard A. Garrity, nephew of Sister Evangeline Anderson from Sacred Heart Monastery, donated a collection of books consisting of: "The 100 Greatest Books of All Time" (100 volumes), "The First Edition Society" (70 volumes), "Signed Great Books of Our Time" (60 volumes) and "Signed First Editions" (78 volumes).

Garrity wanted his collection to be available to the college and the Yankton community. His gift was put in place to honor Sister Evangeline and her lifetime dedication and service to the development and academic standards of Mount Marty College.

Sandra Brown, Mount Marty College library director, said, "The books themselves are works of art." Each volume is custom-bound in genuine leather ornamented in 22-karat gold. The library has the collection prominently housed in the Sister Evangeline Anderson Reading Room, another gift that was testimony to her accomplished life which included 17 years as president of Mount Marty College.

Brown devised a way to catalog and process the collection for circulation in order to protect the beauty of the books. She is honoring Garrity's wish that these books be part of the working library so they could be checked out at any time.

"This outstanding collection contains not only some of the greatest books of all time, but many of the best contemporary titles and authors as well," Brown said.

Brown says that the library's visitors have been awestruck to discover they can check out this collection and the books have already been used extensively by students, faculty, staff and members of the Yankton community.

The Mount Marty College Library is open during the school year from 7:30 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 7:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday and 1-5 p.m. Saturday. Summer hours are 8 a.m.-5 p.m. weekdays. For more information about this collection or the Mount Marty College Library, contact Brown at 605-668-1555.
