REFORM

dent's approval would extend coverage to 32 million Americans who lack it, ban insurers from denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions and cut deficits by an estimated $138 billion over a decade. If realized, the expansion of coverage would include 95 percent of all eligible individuals under age 65.

For the first time, most Americans would be required to purchase insurance, and face penalties if they refused. Much of the money in the bill would be devoted to subsidies to help families at incomes of up to $88,000 a year pay their premiums.

Far beyond the political ramifications — a concern the president repeatedly insisted he paid no mind — were the sweeping changes the bill held in store for millions of individuals, the insurance companies that would come under tougher control and the health care providers, many of whom would face higher taxes.

Crowds of protesters outside the Capitol shouted "just vote no" in a futile attempt to stop the inevitable taking place inside a House packed with lawmakers and ringed with spectators in the galleries above.

Across hours of debate, House Democrats predicted the larger of the two bills, costing $940 billion over a decade, would rank with other great social legislation of recent decades.

"We will be joining those who established Social Security, Medicare and now, tonight, health care for all Americans, said Speaker Nancy Pelosi, partner to Obama and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., in the grueling campaign to pass the legislation.

"This is the civil rights act of the 21st century," added Rep. Jim Clyburn of South Carolina, the top-ranking black member of the House.

Republicans readily agreed the bill would affect everyone in America, but warned repeatedly of the burden imposed by more than $900 billion in tax increases and Medicare cuts combined.

"We have failed to listen to America," said Rep. John Boehner of Ohio, leader of a party that has vowed to carry the fight into the fall's midterm elections for control of Congress.

The measure would also usher in a significant expansion of Medicaid, the federal-state health care program for the poor. Coverage would be required for incomes up to 133 percent of the federal poverty level, $29,327 a year for a family of four. Childless adults would be covered for the first time, starting in 2014.

The insurance industry, which spent millions on advertising trying to block the bill, would come under new federal regulation. They would be forbidden from placing lifetime dollar limits on policies, from denying coverage to children because of pre-existing conditions and from canceling policies when a policyholder becomes ill.

Parents would be able to keep children up to age 26 on their family insurance plans, three years longer than is now the case.

A new high-risk pool would offer coverage to uninsured people with medical problems until 2014, when the coverage expansion would go into high gear.

The final obstacle to passage was cleared a few hours before the vote, when Obama and Democratic leaders reached a compromise with anti-abortion lawmakers whose rebellion had left the outcome in doubt. The president issued an executive order pledging that no federal funds would be used for elective abortion, satisfying Rep. Bart Stupak of Michigan and a handful of like-minded lawmakers.

A spokesman for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops expressed skepticism that the presidential order would satisfy the church's objections.

For the president, the events capped an 18-day stretch in which he traveled to four states and lobbied more than 60 wavering lawmakers in person or by phone to secure passage of his signature domestic issue. According to some who met with him, he warned that the bill's demise could cripple his still-young presidency.

JC Penney To Help Boys & Girls Club

From March 24-April 6, shoppers at JCPenney in the Yankton Mall are invited to "round up" their purchases to the nearest whole dollar and donate the difference to The Boys & Girls Club of the Missouri Area to support quality afterschool programs in their community.

JCPenney has partnered with Boys & Girls Club of the Missouri River Area to provide children in need with access to life-enriching after-school programs that foster their academic, physical and social development.

"The availability of affordable after-school programs continues to be an important community objective in order to meet the needs of working families," said Robert Smith, executive director. "As customers shop for the Easter season, we hope they will keep our mission in mind by rounding up their purchases to benefit a local cause."

All funds raised from JCPenney's "Round-up" campaign will make it possible for more local youth to participate in Boys & Girls Club of the Missouri River Area after-school programming, which includes Power Hour (homework help), Torch Club and Arts & Crafts, to name a few.

Recent studies show that more than a quarter of America's school children are on their own between the hours of 3-6 p.m. each day. More parents seek the resources to enroll their children in a beneficial after-school program that help kids develop social skills, provide opportunities to be physically active and achieve academic success in school. JCPenney's continuing support and commitment to the after-school cause has made it possible for more children to participate in positive after-school environments nationwide.

Boys & Girls Club of the Missouri River Area, with clubs in Avon, Marty, Wagner and Yankton, provides youth a safe place to learn and grow, ongoing relationships with caring, adult professionals, life-enhancing programs and character developing experiences, diversity and hope and opportunity.
