don't want me to have the catch-and-shoot 3's."

The Jacks never led by less than 17 points the rest of the way. The intense, physical Jaguar defense, though, kept SDSU from coasting.

"It didn't feel like we were up 10," Johnston noted. "It felt like we were down 10, even with a minute left."

Young had eight rebounds to go with her game-high 14 points. Jennie Sunnarborg had 13 points. Ashley Eide and Gabrielle Boever each had 12 points in the win.

Kerah Nelson finished with 13 points and nine rebounds to lead IUPUI. Emily Phillips had 12 points and Dawn Luster added 10 points for the Jaguars.

SDSU takes a 23-9 record into the finals, a 3 p.m. start against UMKC. The Jackrabbits will need to refocus prior to the game, Johnston noted.

"The emotional part will be hard. I could bust out crying right now because I feel so bad for Steph," he said. "We can feel bad now, but we need to figure it out tonight and come back ready to play."

The experience of losing a teammate to injury is not new for the Jackrabbits this season, having lost sophomore Megan Waytashek before the season got going.

"We have two potential starters that will be on the bench, counting Megan," Johnston said. "For us to continue to advance is a testament to how many good players we have on our team."

IUPUI, which finishes at 13-19, will return all five starters next of the floor, starting the half on a 14-3 run. Dykstra had seven points and Wolters four points in the rally.

"We started playing inside-out, and things started happening," said Dykstra, who finished with 17 points.

SDSU extended the lead to 15 on a three-point play by Wolters, the first of 14 straight Jackrabbit points by the junior guard.

The Jackrabbits never led by less than 10 points the rest of the way.

Wolters finished with a game-high 31 points, seven rebounds and six assists.

"Nate's a great player," said Jones, who had the responsibility for guarding Wolters for much of his time in the contest. "He wears you down throughout the course of a game. It's a mental game, and you have to play it with him the whole game."

For SUU, Heuir finished with 14 points. Jones added nine points in what will be the Thunderbirds' final game in Summit League play. Southern Utah leaves the Summit League to join the Big Sky Conference after this season.

"It's been great to be a part of this league," said SUU head coach Roger Reid. "This league is ranked 12th in America, and it doesn't get enough credit."

SDSU now faces a Leatherneck squad it swept during the regular season, 67-66 on the road on Dec. 3, and 74-57 at home Feb. 23.

"(Sunday) night when Southern Utah beat Oakland our fans were celebrating. I was not. I was in a bad mood because I knew they would be a tougher matchup," Nagy said. "I felt the same way tonight. (WIU coach) Jim Molinari has done an unbelievable job, and has gotten a lot better players now."

SDSU will take a 25-7 record into the title game. Southern Utah ends its season with a 14-17 mark.

Nine More Claim Abuse By Late Red Sox Clubhouse Chief

BOSTON (AP) — Nine more men are accusing a now-dead Boston Red Sox clubhouse manager of sexual abuse, including assaults at Fenway Park and Memorial Stadium, former home of the Baltimore Orioles.

Said 11 men have now come forward to him to claim abuse by Donald Fitzpatrick between the 1960s and early 1990s.

Ten of the men worked in their teens as clubhouse attendants, including eight who worked for the Red Sox and two for the Orioles. Another man says he was 12 when Fitzpatrick lured him to his Randolph home with promises of baseball memorabilia, then molested him.

Ron Shelton, a former Orioles attendant, said Fitzpatrick molested him twice, the first time after cornering him in an equipment room in 1990 at Memorial Stadium.

"I just want to know, 'Why did this happen?' He violated me," Shelton said at a news conference with Garabedian in Boston on Monday.

Fitzpatrick, who died in 2005, resigned from the Red Sox in 1991 after the first of the charges against him. In 2002, he pleaded guilty to attempted sexual battery on a child under 12. The Red Sox have also settled a lawsuit by seven Florida men who claimed Fitzpatrick abused them.

Counting the newest allegations, 21 men in three states have accused Fitzpatrick of sexual abuse.

"I wouldn't be surprised if there were hundreds of victims of Donald Fitzpatrick out there," Garabedian said. "Pedophiles don't stop until they're caught, or until they pass away. They just do not stop and he had a 30-year reign."

Garabedian said he's asking for $5 million for each victim from the Orioles or Red Sox, depending on which team they worked for when Fitzpatrick allegedly abused them.

He called on the Red Sox to release any information they have about Fitzpatrick, including any documents related to abuse charges or if there are any confidential settlements.

Garabedian also said he's considering asking the state attorney general to conduct an investigation into Fitzpatrick.

Fitzpatrick's death ended the possibility of criminal charges against him, and Garabedian said no civil action is possible in at least nine of his 11 cases because the statute of limitations has expired.

But he said the team should have known what was going on, and the current Sox owners have a responsibility to the victims, even though the alleged abuse happened under a different group of owners.

Garabedian is a prominent attorney for clergy sex abuse victims in Boston and he repeatedly compared the Red Sox to the Boston Archdiocese, saying the team was being equally silent about the abuse at Fenway Park.

"Another cathedral in Boston has a dirty little secret," he said.

The Red Sox on Monday released the same statement by team attorney Daniel Goldberg that they released when the first of Garabedian's clients came forward in December. The statement said Fitzpatrick's action were "abhorrent" and noted he was forced out by a previous ownership group as soon as the accusations became known.

"The club is unaware of any specifics regarding the matters brought forward recently by these individuals but, given the sensitive nature of the matter, will not have further comment," the statement read.
