HHS Will Have Dogs For Adoption At Events

Heartland Humane Society will have dogs available for adoption at two upcoming events.
Join the shelter in Vermillion on Saturday, March 16, from 10 a.m.-1 p.m. at Past and Present and celebrate the Animal Themed family arts crawl. Dogs available for adoption will be at the store to welcome the general public. Past and Present is located at 7 West Cherry Street.
Heartland Humane Society will also have dogs available to meet at Tractor Supply Company in Yankton on Saturday, March 23, from 11 a.m.-2 p.m. TSC is located 2908 Broadway Ave.
"Meet and Greets allow our dogs waiting for adoption to get out into the public and make new friends," said Kerry Schmidt, executive director at Heartland Humane Society.
Schmidt encourages anyone interested in adopting an animal to fill out an application prior to the Meet and Greet. You can pick up an application at the shelter or find it online at www.heartlandhumanesociety.net.
For more information, contact Heartland Humane Society 605-664-4244.

City To Study Water Plant Issues Tonight Project

BY NATHAN JOHNSON
nathan.johnson@yankton.net

The Yankton City Commission will hear an engineering report tonight (Monday) regarding the potential for an estimated $28.7 million in upgrades to the community's water system.
On the table are water treatment plant improvements and the development of a new source of water.
"This is probably the biggest undertaking that I've been involved with since being at the city," Mayor Nancy Wenande said during a media briefing Friday.
In addition to the report from HDR, Inc., the commission will con-

Study

"Ninety percent of all the wind development in the nation has occurred in states with an RPS," Cwach said. "You can't ignore that kind of fact."
Cwach said there are two primary arguments that have kept South Dakota legislators from adopting an RPS.
First, some legislators didn't like the idea of forcing the utilities to do something.
"To me, that's an absurd argument because state government forces utilities to do a lot of things," Cwach said. "A utility cannot increase its rates without the approval of the state, for example."
The second concern is that an RPS will cause electricity prices to rise significantly.
However, the study by Cwach and Baldwin found that the adoption of an RPS leads to a one-time .68 of a cent increase in the price of a kilowatt of electricity, and the effect in subsequent years is estimated at .16 of a cent per kilowatt.
"I think we would all be willing to live with a .16-cent increase if we knew we were going to get 160 megawatts of wind energy development every year," Cwach said.
The 160 megawatts is a reference sider applying for approximately $28.7 million in Drinking Water State Revolving Fund Loan Program funds at a rate of 3 percent for 20 years.

Wenande said nothing is set in stone at this point, and among the options being considered is a partnership with B-Y Water.
Although no one has forgotten the lawsuit B-Y filed against the City of Yankton several years ago and the resulting settlement, she said officials from both organizations are not letting that past dictate their future relationship.
"B-Y has offered several different scenarios to us, and we're taking a serious look at all of them," Wenande said.

ties that have leased 30,000 acres to support a wind farm. They argue the project would have a much better chance of moving forward if South Dakota had an RPS.
"They already have approval from the Western Area Power Administration to interconnect to their grid," Cwach said. "Their number one problem is, they can't find a buyer. No utility is interested in investing in the wind farm because they have no reason to do it."
The study concludes that "South Dakotans would benefit immensely from the implementation of a state RPS. Unlike the RRCEO, an RPS would encourage our retail electricity providers to finally develop our renewable energy resources to serve South Dakota consumers while not significantly impacting retail utility rates for consumers. At the same time, an RPS provides well-paying jobs in rural South Dakota."
Cwach said he hopes state legislators read the study.
"I would love to have a serious conversation about these issues and see the interest groups in the state start advocating for an RPS," he stated. "It's the right thing to do. I would like to see the policy changed in the next legislative session."

City Manager Amy Nelson said that, no matter what option is selected, water users can expect their rates to go up in the future to pay for the developments.
"We have to be up front about that," she stated. "How that will look, I don't know. It's a hard pill to swallow, but for water, I think people will understand. They have to have it."
In other business, the city will consider a Meridian Bridge rental policy and an agreement with HDR to research issues related to solid waste collection system.
The meeting gets under way at 7 p.m. in the City of Yankton Meeting Room, located at the Technical Education Center, 1200 W. 21st St.

gives a certain amount of glare but not like glass," he added.
"I invested a lot of time and money into the project but at the end of the day, we're certainly not going to put lots and lots more money into a deal and then have it pulled with a cease-and-desist order," Golden continued.
He said the unassembled greenhouse has already been sold to a buyer in New Jersey.
In March 2009, the County Commission rezoned 36 acres from rural-transitional to a planned unit development to make way for the construction of the greenhouse and fish production facility. It was also to include a worm farm, an aquatic culture area, a shop/office area, a retail center and possibly a restaurant.
At the time, Golden projected it could take five years to complete. During last week's commission meeting, he said other projects had delayed progress on Heartland Harvest Farms.
Golden told the commission that he believes the property may now be of interest to Yankton County.
"That property is probably the best property in the area if you guys were ever going to move forward and think about putting any kind of sewage lagoons or treatment facility there," he said. "I'm probably going to put the building up for sale in May or so, but I wanted to throw that thought out to you guys ... I think that's potentially an option you might want to consider. If you have any interest, we can certainly talk later."
