Carda noted that her experience working at Mount Marty should help her adjust to a position on the school board, while Becker added his experience in budgeting for businesses would give him some experience managing budgets.

Each candidate was also asked about his or her ability to represent the interests of the entire district.

"Teachers are most important in education," Wurth said. "The teachers and students is what education is all about, and we need to make students and teachers the priority."

Carda said the school board is representing students and sets forth to educate students.

"We need to take into account the importance of teachers," she said. "We also need to be fiscally responsible and be able to do the most with the least."

Becker noted his ability to understand issues and weighing their options as a way he would be able to represent the entire district.

Fitzgerald spoke of the role of the district in educating youth. He cited the high test scores and graduation rates of children that attend YSD.

Another question that candidates were asked dealt with staff morale.

"I don't think the staff that work in management have a low morale," Becker said. "If issues arise, I hope staff members can bring up their problems (to the administration)."

Fitzgerald said when finances become a problem, staff morale will decline, regardless of industry.

"Even though the morale of teachers might be low, I don't think that deters them from doing the best job they can," he said.

Wurth said he definitely thinks there is a big morale problem, and said he would oppose wasteful spending.

Carda thinks there probably is a morale issue as well.

"The question becomes whether the issue is externally or internally driven," she said. "It's an important issue, and with budget reductions, it's only human nature to have a lower morale when you begin wondering about job security."

All of the board candidates agreed they wouldn't necessarily know what to cut from the budget without being able to take more time to look at the budget and the implications of cutting certain programs.

Other topics candidates spoke about included the sentinel bill, the role of the board and superintendent, elementary school class sizes and the ability to attract top-notch teachers to YSD in spite of financial problems.

Flamingo Fundraiser Returns To Yankton

They're back! Those pink pests are invading our yards again! That's right, the pink flamingos have been spotted in Yankton and are circulating around town. The local community group flocking these feathered figures is raising money for the Special Olympics via the Polar Plunge on April 21.

Each night they flock a new house with 15 pink plastic flamingos. In the morning, the homeowner wakes up to find a pink flock of flamingos in their yard. For a donation, this group will come and herd up these birds and flock another yard of that homeowners choosing! Last year, this team was able to raise roughly $3,000 for Special Olympics with the help of these pink, plastic pals.

So keep a look out for yards that have been flocked. If you wish to do a special "Super Flocking," for a $100 donation the group will combine all 30 flamingos and flock whomever you choose, whenever you choose, with a personal message that you choose.

Remember, these flocks only fly in the dead of night and are hard to spot, so if you wish to learn more, contact Tom Beltran at 715-338-2938 or by email at tbbeltran@gmail.com.

Planning and Development District III.

While the meetings will be moderated by Ambrosion and Garrity, they want the public to direct the conversation.

"We both have strong feelings and ideas, but we don't feel that now is the time for us to be exposing them," Garrity said. "We can use them later to answer questions or offer input. Right now, we feel strongly that the citizens have to throw out their issues — everything from the condition of the highway to the lack of a sewer system to how the signs are out there."

If people were asked about the current long-term plan for the corridor, Garrity believes most would respond that it involves recreational storage and campgrounds with an occasional house.

"The houses are extremely vulnerable. I'd be really concerned if I were a homeowner," he added. "You don't know what's going to be next door. We don't have it clearly defined."

"That corridor is probably one of the prettiest drives in South Dakota, and if we don't watch ourselves, it's going to turn into storage buildings for the benefit of people who don't live here and want a place to put their boat during the winter. Why are we giving up some of the best view in the state for that? I'd like the citizens to come forward and say what they want."

Ambrosion said they would also like people to share how they experience the corridor on a daily basis.

"Do you want to see the rural element of it preserved? Do you want to see it urbanized?" he asked. "Do you even care what's on either side of the road?"

After the first two public meetings, Garrity hopes to get volunteers for a steering committee that would be involved with developing a comprehensive plan.

Ambrosion and Garrity will provide research, support and record the activities of the committee.

"We can also keep them focused on, 'This is the project you are doing and the parameters you are working within,'" Garrity said.

It's anticipated it will take 18-24 months before a comprehensive plan is finished.

The March and April meetings will both be held at 7 p.m. in the Yankton County Commission Chambers, 321 West Third Street, Yankton.
