Neb. DMV To Offer Online Apps For Fuel, Trip Permits

LINCOLN, Neb. — The Nebraska Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) is announcing the launch of a new online application for the issuance of trip and fuel permits.

With the passage of LB 250 in the 2013 Legislative Session, the DMV was charged with creating an online fuel and trip permit process on or before January 2015 for interstate trucks operating through Nebraska. The DMV is launching the new service one year ahead of the mandate and is available at clickdmv.ne.gov.

"The Department of Motor Vehicles is pleased to be able to provide another online service to the commercial carriers who travel through Nebraska," said Rhonda Lahm, director of the Nebraska Department of Motor Vehicles. "We recognize the important role the trucking industry plays in our state's economy and this new service is designed to save them time."

The new online service is available for use by the public and will replace the current paper process administered by the Nebraska State Patrol. "We appreciate the opportunity to collaborate with the Department of Motor Vehicles on this project," said Colonel David Sankey, Superintendent of the Nebraska State Patrol. "The new online service is another example of Nebraska's efforts to offer citizens a faster, more efficient means of doing business. Purchasing trip permits via the internet should expedite the process for commercial motor vehicle companies and drivers, promoting continued commerce across our state."

The current process requires non-resident trucks and buses to stop at a proration station upon entering the state to purchase the required permits. To accommodate the transition to the new permit application process, both electronic and paper permits will be available until March 31, 2014. Effective April 1, 2014, fuel and trip permits will only be available through the online service, and will need to be purchased prior to entering the state.

The trip and fuel permits application process can be accessed at clickdmv.ne.gov/.

This new service is an addition to the other online services offered to our Commercial Motor Carriers at clickdmv.ne.gov. The new service accepts credit cards for payment.

Ways To Make Your Community Healthier

BY MICHAEL ROIZEN, M.D.,
AND MEHMET OZ, M.D.

If you've ever gotten one of those official-looking class-action lawsuit letters in your mailbox, you know the drill. Step 1: Rip it open. Think, "Hey, looks like some corporation ran afoul of something and owes me big money!" Step 2: Wade through the legalese to discover that, shucks, you might qualify for a settlement, but it's so small that it wouldn't buy a gallon of gas. Step 3: Toss it. (Sigh.)

Ever wonder what happens to unclaimed cash left on the table after a company settles a big lawsuit with a large group of people? It can amount to tens of millions of dollars. In most of the U.S., it usually goes right back to the company or person accused of cheating or causing harm in the first place. But it doesn't have to.

In 11 states, this unclaimed money is fueling better health, better schools, food banks, housing and legal assistance for those in need. We think that's the way it should be everywhere! And now, it can be.

A pioneering movement based in Dr. Mike's hometown (we're talking about you, Cleveland!) is urging lawyers (yup, lawyers) in Ohio and beyond to lead the charge. We're so inspired that we're devoting this week's column to this exciting project — and we hope you share it with friends, family and especially with any attorneys you know.

Patrick Perotti, a partner in the northeast Ohio law firm of Dworkin & Bernstein, got the ball rolling several years ago when he discovered that there were hundreds of thousands of dollars left over in one of his first consumer class-action lawsuits. Wielding a legal concept called "cy pres" (pronounced sigh-PRAY), which means "as near as possible," he argued that the funds should go to charity. They did, and he vowed never to settle a class action without considering the use of cy pres for unclaimed funds.

That was just the beginning. Perotti and his partners founded Ohio Lawyers Give Back to help spread the word about this health-promoting doctrine and to encourage other attorneys at other firms to do the same thing. The group estimates that $500 million in class-action settlement money goes uncollected each year across the U.S. because only 2 percent of people who can make claims in class-action suits bother to file all of the paperwork!

To date, Mr. Perotti has distributed more than $25 million to more than 187 groups that help fight and prevent heart disease, cystic fibrosis, vision loss, muscular dystrophy, foot problems, leukemia, cerebral palsy, autism, diabetes, alcoholism and more. Kids have been the big winners, with funds going to help a children's hospital, a kids' emergency room, schools, after-school programs, projects that provide warm clothing and shoes, and programs for pregnant women and mothers with new babies, too. Want to help?

Make your state a "Smart State"! If you live in one of 11 smart states — California, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, North Carolina, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee and Washington, according to the National Law Journal — rules direct lawyers to make plans upfront for this unspent money, usually earmarking it for legal aid or charities. But in the rest of the states, there usually are no provisions.

So if you don't live in one of the smart states, spread the word; and if you're a lawyer, our friends at Ohio Lawyers Give Back can help you reclaim and redirect leftover funds from class-action suits you've worked on. That'll make your community stronger, healthier and happier.

By the way, if you try to make this a state law, you probably will run into resistance. Opposition by the Chamber of Commerce is why this smart idea was not enacted as law yet in Ohio (according to one key politician we spoke with). But even where it is not a law, each plaintiff's lawyer can insist on such a community-building resolution. And lawyers won't earn an extra dime by doing this — but the rewards are priceless.
