REACHING OUT

Thiesse's resume is breathtaking in the wide variety of individuals and causes she has benefited. However, she has shown a special passion for helping cancer victims, particularly young people.

One project hit very close to home for Thiesse. Her friend and classmate, Adam Walter, was diagnosed twice with Hodgkin's lymphoma. She founded "Walter's Warriors" to raise awareness and money. The initiative, which included T-shirt sales, has raised more than $7,500 so far.

"Adam is one of my good friends," she said. "I thought (this project) would go far, but not as much as it did. It just exploded. We sold T-shirts to people as far away as Texas, and I think to every one of (Walter's fellow) baseball teams in the state (of South Dakota). I also designed and still operate the Walter's Warriors Facebook page which currently has over 1,000 likes."

Thiesse took the show of support one step further.

"I planned a Red Out night during the baseball season and had everyone wear their shirts to support my friend," she said. In addition, a local business donated cupcakes with Walter's uniform number for the fans and players.

Thiesse has also designed T-shirts and operated the Facebook page benefiting Quinn Pesicka of Sioux Falls and her battle with brain cancer. Thiesse has sent shirts across the country and has expanded it to sweatshirts. The effort has raised more than $10,000 for the Pesicka family to use for medical treatment.

"I helped put together an order for the Texas A&M soccer team and shipped the shirts to them. The soccer players wore them for Quinn when her family went down (to Texas) for a game," Thiesse said. "(I) also put together an order for Quinn's entire school as a surprise when she returned to school."

In addition, Thiesse has designed T-shirts and set up a Facebook page for Tom Rokahr, who is battling leukemia. She also spearheaded a collection of Legos to keep him busy while he remains hospitalized.

In addition, she has written letters and packed backpacks for children who had cancer. She has also participated several years in Alex's Lemonade Stand and Relay for Life, both national cancer programs.

She has also worked with Relay for Life in Yankton.

"(I) also put together a talent portion to perform late-night entertainment," she said. "I also helped our group — the youngest group they've ever had participate — make lanterns in memory of family members. Our group raised over $3,000 for cancer research."

TAKING ON OTHER CAUSES

Not limiting herself to local issues, Thiesse has performed outreach through a mission trip to Puerto Rico. She hopes to pursue another mission trip while attending college.

She has also raised awareness on social issues such as bullying, the images of women and girls in the media and a Girl's Night Out to promote self-confidence in girls. Last summer, she took a class at the University of South Dakota called Women, Power and Leadership.

In one project, she showed the negative images and stereotypes for females found in the media.

"I took multiple magazines and changed the ads with post-it (notes) and permanent markers," she said. "The ads I changed (had) sexually objectified women. By shutting down these ads, it helped bring awareness to young girls and magazine companies."

She has also fought bullying at the local and national level.

"(I) attended a PTA-sponsored anti-bullying national campaign in Cincinnati," she said. "We did research and presented our ideas on preventing bullying in high school. (I) participated in a national commercial and presented ideas to (YHS principal Jennifer) Johnke.

On another front, Thiesse has reached out to others in need because of misfortune or disaster.

* She collected more than 60 pounds of art supplies and superhero capes, along with speaking in her church to increase awareness, to help children affected by the trauma of Oklahoma tornadoes.

* She made thank-you cards for local firefighters for their service including their battling a neighbor's house fire. She also made cards for the families of Arizona firefighters who died in a 2013 wildfire.

* She collected hygiene products and clothes for the neighbors when their house burned down. She raised more than $300 worth of donations for the family.

In addition, she graduated from the South Dakota Highway Patrol Youth Trooper Academy where she spent a week observing troopers in action.

She has served as a HOBY ambassador, attended Girls State and served as a Youth PTA South Dakota candidate for the national conference in Cincinnati.

Her volunteer work have benefited children in need of shoes, the hungry, house fire victims, the elderly, Special Olympics, tutoring, a blood drive and a food drive.

She has helped raise funds for her high school marching band and volunteered at a car wash to help classmates attend the National History Day conference in Washington.

Her efforts aren't limited to her fellow human beings. She has undertaken efforts to benefit pets at the local Humane Society and other animals through wildlife organizations.

Looking ahead, Thiesse loves teaching and anticipates a career in the classroom, possibly as a translator with her Spanish skills or even taking more mission trips.

"I feel that life is a learning process, and I try to be an example for others by first leading and hoping to have them follow me in my volunteering," she said.

"I sense people learn better by seeing the direct results of time, patience and hard work."

Legislature, in December.

Roberts spent her professional career working in state government and participated to various extents at different times in the background of state-level Republican politics.

She served at senior levels for Republican governors Bill Janklow, George S. Mickelson, Walter Dale Miller, Mike Rounds and Daugaard.

Her husband is Clay Roberts, a rancher. His father is former U.S. Rep. Clint Roberts of Presho.

Former state Rep. Charlie Hoffman of Eureka delivered the formal nomination of her candidacy for chairwoman Saturday at the Republicans' state central committee meeting.

"Pam Roberts is the kind of person who brings everyone in to the table," Hoffman said.

Bob Riter of Fort Pierre gave the seconding remarks. Riter said she put forward policies successfully during her time in state government and praised "her willingness to be inclusive."

"Certainly she'll be well able to lead the party," Riter said. "She has the ability to bring people together."

Roberts acknowledged she didn't know much about the chairman's duties when Daugaard approached her.

"A lot of people in the room don't know me, don't know much about me," she said.

She promised to listen and take advice, emphasize strong local organizations and be "open and transparent" as chairwoman.

"No secrets. There's room at the table," she said.

Roberts said the initial priority would be to review the organization's budget, stress efficiency and spend the next 10 months raising "a lot of money" for 2016.

Lawrence, Daugaard and Roberts talked about the opportunity to elect a Republican to the White House in the 2016 election.

"I know this is a big job," Roberts said about her new role.

this year and he supports amendments to expand the proposal.

TRANSPORTATION

The House State Affairs Committee could take up a proposal this week to raise revenue for road and bridge funding in South Dakota. The Senate approved its version of the plan, which is what the House will take up, Gosch said.

The House has already dispatched a separate version of the plan to focus on the Senate proposal. Gosch said he expects amendments to restrict the revenue raised in the measure, which will set up negotiations for what is likely the most serious issue lawmakers consider this session.

ATHLETICS POLICY ON TRANSGENDER STUDENTS

A proposal that would void a South Dakota High School Activities Association policy on transgender students is set to be considered in the Senate Education Committee on Tuesday. The policy requires the association to review requests by transgender students or their guardians to decide on which team the student can participate.

Republican Rep. Jim Bolin, of Canton, is sponsoring the measure on the House side. He has said the policy changes the character of high school athletics.

The bill has passed through the House.

OBITUARIES

Max Zeeb

Funeral services for Max Zeeb, 60, will be held at the Salem Reformed Church in Menno at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday, March 3, 2015 with Reverend Michael Hecht officiating. Burial will be in the Menno Cemetery.

Visitation will begin at 5 p.m. Monday evening at the Salem Reformed Church with a prayer service to follow at 7 p.m. Visitation will resume one hour prior to the funeral service at the church.

Kostel Memorial Chapel, Menno, is assisting with service details.

Max Fred Zeeb was born on April 12, 1954 to Marvin and Wilma (Auch) Zeeb in Scotland, SD. He grew up on a rural farm near Lesterville and graduated from Scotland High School in 1972. He then continued his education and graduated from USD/Springfield with an associate's degree in auto body in the spring of 1974.

He moved to Menno, residing there most of his life and followed his dream by opening his own shop, Zeeb Auto Body, on July 1, 1974. After establishing his business, Max purchased farm ground and livestock in rural Lesterville. He had a passion for cars, animals, hunting, and fishing. Max always enjoyed company and Saturday mornings were spent sipping coffee at the shop, catching up with old friends.

Max was baptized at the Salem Reformed Church on January 13, 1954, where he remained a member and was confirmed on April 7, 1968. Christ took him into his arms on February 27, 2015 having reached the age of 60 years, 10 months and 15 days.

Max is survived by his son, Justin Zeeb with special friend, Jessica Renner (Brianna, Jayden and Ava) of Menno and daughter, Savanah DeBelts (Jason) of Harrisburg; four brothers and one sister: Larry (Marge) Zeeb of Menno, Curtis (Elaine) Zeeb of Lesterville, Milo Zeeb of Phillip, Renay (Virgil) Souhrada of Tabor, Scott (Mindy) Zeeb of O'Neill, NE and many nieces, nephews and friends.

He was preceded in death by his twin brother, Mark, and his Mother and Father, Marvin and Wilma Zeeb.
