Press&Dakotan DAILY DOSE

Daily opinions from the P&D Sports Staff on local and national high school, college and pro sports.

BY JEREMY HOECK jeremy.hoeck@yankton.net

It goes in waves, right? Some years, the Press & Dakotan sports department will have a handful of area basketball teams to cover at the various South Dakota and Nebraska state tournaments. And then we'll have years like 2015.

Across the border in Nebraska, we've been pretty fortunate this year. Of the schools in our vast coverage area, we had the Crofton and Wynot girls not only make it to state, but reach the championship game — Crofton, of course, winning for the fourth year in a row. And then this weekend in the boys' tournament, we have Bloomfield and Hartington Cedar Catholic, but they both lost their first game on Thursday — ending their seasons.

Such a cross-over between the states can lead to some difficult situations. We have area teams in three different locations: Lincoln, Nebraska (boys), Huron (Viborg-Hurley girls) and Watertown (Elk Point-Jefferson girls). It would've been even more interesting from our perspective if, say, the Yankton girls and Avon girls also made it to state. And now next weekend with the South Dakota Boys' Tournament, the only area team we have is Parker, in Class B up in Aberdeen. We're not likely to make the trip to Aberdeen for that tournament, so it'll suddenly become a rather quiet weekend around here — though we've certainly got a lot of prep work to do for the upcoming spring seasons. And of course, we've got the University of South Dakota women and men likely to continue playing in various post-season tournaments. In time, we'll have years like this where we don't have very many South Dakota teams in action. At the very most, we'll have 2-3 teams per class make it to state, but typically it's one — based on the district and region assignments, most of our area teams knock each other out. As James and I often say, we're very fortunate to live in the area we do, with schools in both states. It makes March a hectic but exciting month.
