ON THIS DATE

75 YEARS AGO

Wednesday, March 27, 1940

• Today is a memorable anniversary for Yankton and adjacent territory along the Missouri river, for it was on March 27, 1881, 59 years ago, that a break-up in the heavy ice on the stream occurred which was to lead, during the next few weeks, to the worst gorging and flood in the history of this section.

• Attorney General Leo Temmey said today he had asked all South Dakota attorneys to join in fighting the operation of slot machines. He cited three circuit court decisions ruling that slot machines are gambling devices and illegal in the state.

50 YEARS AGO

Saturday, March 27, 1965

• Gov. Nils Boe Friday approved

the establishment of a Job Corps conservation center to be located at Swift Bird on the Cheyenne River Indian reservation in central South Dakota.

• With a nudge from President Johnson, the House Committee on Un-American Activities is expected to vote next week to launch a formal investigation of the Ku Klux Klan.

25 YEARS AGO

Tuesday, March 27, 1990

• Some of the shortcomings listed by a magazine that ranked South Dakota among the 10 worst-run states are already being addressed, Gov. George Mickelson said.

• The early success of legal gambling in Deadwood already has business people wondering if gambling would work in their towns, too.

WALL ST. RECAP

numbers and see if there was something in the estimate that was off or if the bid was, in fact, too high," he said. "Then it's up to the transportation commission to decide whether to draws 100,000 visitors during the three-day celebration. Such events offer a trial run for the world archery tournament.

However, there are also differences between the events, Nickles said.

"With Riverboat Days, we know what to expect. We have people come and go all day long. And we're drawing people from a 150-mile radius," he said. "With the archery tournament, we're hosting people from all over the world. Everything we do may seem strange to them, and many of their customs may seem strange to us. Our role is to make them as comfortable and feel as much at home as we can."

Yankton Police Chief Brian Paulsen saw Thursday's briefing as an excellent opportunity for first responders to familiarize themselves with the NFPA complex and to learn the fastest response during emergencies.

"We have to think about all the possibilities," he said. "It will be great if nothing happens, but our planning needs to be efficient and effective."

The briefing also continued the cooperation among Yankton, Vermillion, Yankton County and Clay County emergency personnel, he added.

"We started talking about this (archery tournament) after Jan. 1. There will be a full five months of discussion leading up to this event. We are working for the safety of the athletes, their entourage, spectators and the community," the police chief said.

"Our planning covers from the moment they arrive until the last day they are here. Even after the contestants leave, we'll have a debriefing on how we can improve the process."

Tournament director Nancy Wenande noted the preliminary registration stands at nearly 700 contestants and support staff. The number could change before final registration May 10, with the possibility of hosting visitors from 60 nations around the globe.

In response, the Yankton Area Chamber of Commerce is offering cultural diversity training sessions, Wenande said. More information can be found on the Chamber website or by contacting Executive Director Carmen Schramm.

"You don't need to be in the service industry to attend the (cultural diversity) sessions. It's a great educational opportunity for anyone," Wenande said. "For the incoming contestants, we have the FAQ (Frequently Asked Questions) on the website."

Wenande encourages the public to attend the archery tournament, and she welcomes area residents to sign up as volunteers.

She predicts the international visitors will be impressed not only by the local hospitality but also the vast prairie horizons.

"Many of these contestants come from cities and countries where space is at a premium," she said.

"When they arrive in Yankton, they'll see thousands of acres of farmland and miles of highway. They'll just be amazed by all our space."

Haas

"I remember the first year that we had an appreciation (event) after the tournament," he said. "We held it down in Gipper's and we had a three-foot sub and two cases of beer donated and when we left, we had a little bit of the sub left. ... Now when we have the appreciation afterwards ... the last few years, we've had it at the events center and there's got to be 300 people that show up to this thing."

Jeanne and David Haas have also worked tournaments since the beginning.

"It's kind of fun because you got to see the same kids over and over as they grew up," Jeanne said. "Our kids were all in it, so we never had a problem with getting volunteers to help us."

Curt Roth, president of Yankton Basketball Inc., said these long-term volunteers have been a great asset to the tournament's mission.

"The people that have been with it since the beginning or for a long time all have the same idea that the tournament is for the kids," Roth said. "It's just centered on getting the kids involved — especially the local kids — and giving them an opportunity to play ball. It doesn't matter if they're on a traveling team or if it's just a rec team thrown together for the tournament. It's just about getting those kids in and playing basketball, and I think that's the philosophy of all the volunteers. They just want to see the kids have a good time and they all get a kick out of helping out and just have a good time doing that."

David said Hansen was always able to count on the Haas family when it came to volunteering.

"Ole always liked us there because we had our own crew and he didn't have to worry about it," David said. "He knew that we were going to be there and have everything covered so he didn't have to go looking for anybody. ... We always had our own volunteers lined up — same people all the time — just one less thing for him to worry about."

Hovland said Hansen had a way of making the volunteers feel welcome.

"Ole did it right with making sure everybody knew that they were appreciated for being a part of this," he said. "He made an experience out of it."

Hovland will be volunteering once again during the 2015 tournament. However, Jeanne and David Haas chose to take this tournament off for the birth of a grandchild and to give fresh volunteers a chance to work.

"I'm 65, it's time for me to back off and let some of the young blood get in there," David said.

Lottery

tried various steps in recent years to revive play after revenue plunged in the wake of the 2010 smoking ban and the recession during that same period.

Net income to the state treasury hasn't fully come back to the peak of about $110 million in 2009.

Commission chairman Chuck Turville of Deadwood said ideas would be discussed at a strategy meeting April 22-23.

Turville said the commission intends to establish guidelines for the future of video lottery.

He described the current 7 percent growth as "excellent" and said he would like revenue to continue growing by that much or more.

One of the changes already under way is advertising by the lottery office that promotes video lottery.
