Arizona Gov. Signs Abortion Drug Notification Mandate

BY BOB CHRISTIE AND RYAN VAN VELZER
 Associated Press

PHOENIX — Gov. Doug Ducey signed a bill Monday that requires abortion providers in Arizona to tell women they can reverse the effects of a drug-induced abortion and also bars women from buying any health care plan through the federal marketplace that includes abortion coverage.

The Republican governor made good on a pledge to Arizona residents to defend the "right to life" in a continuation of former Gov. Jan Brewer's tough stance against abortion. Senate Bill 1318 by Republican Sen. Nancy Barto, of Phoenix, is designed primarily to bar women from buying a policy through the federal insurance marketplace that covers abortions.

Advocates on both sides of the issue said the requirement to tell patients an abortion by medication can be reversed is first time such a provision has passed in the U.S.

Critics say there's no science to show drug-induced abortions can be reversed.

The Senate and House passed the bill mainly along party lines after a House committee amended it to include the medication provision. An anti-abortion doctor, Dr. Allan Sawyer, had testified that he recently reversed a drug-induced abortion at 10 weeks but acknowledged the procedure is not widely known.

Sawyer said doctors can give a woman a drug known as progesterone to stop an abortion after she has taken the first of two medications needed to complete the procedure.

Dr. Kathleen Morrell, an abortion doctor and advocate at Physicians for Reproductive Health, said the procedure is not evidence-based and has not been well-researched.

Ducey didn't comment on the requirement that women be told drug-induced abortions can be reversed. He said in a statement that he signed the bill to prevent taxpayer subsidies from being used to fund abortions.

"The American people overwhelmingly oppose taxpayer funding of abortions, and it's no different in Arizona, where we have long-standing policy against subsidizing them with public dollars," Ducey said. "This legislation provides clarity to state law."

Under the Affordable Care Act, states are permitted to buy optional abortion coverage. Women now pay a small extra fee for the coverage, but abortion opponents say the fee isn't enough to pay the actual cost. Advocates for abortion rights dispute that.

About 75 percent of the more than 200,000 Arizona residents who bought insurance policies on the marketplace get a subsidy, according to the latest federal statistics.

There's no breakdown by age or sex, but even those women who don't take subsidies will not be able to get abortion coverage when the bill becomes law.

will get an egg, whether it's on the field or from the Easter Bunny.

Inside the eggs are candy, toys and many special prizes. One of the main prizes on each field is a bicycle, for each age group (in memory of Laraye Andersen). Some of the other prizes are coupons for Dairy Queen Dilly Bars, DQ cakes and Casey $25 gift certificates along with many other miscellaneous prizes. (These assorted card prizes must be redeemed on site at the event.)

The Easter Bunny will be present, also giving out prizes. Small and big kids can get their pictures taken with the furry rabbit. Walgreens will be taking pictures.

"One of the missions as Elk members is to encourage community involvement," Spak said. "At Easter time, we try to bring families together."

The Elks started this event 15 years ago with approximately 500 kids in attendance. It was estimated that more than a couple thousand people attended last year.

"It amazes me how many come from many different areas," Spak said.

Tammy Wiesler, an event volunteer, added, "The involvement from the community is overwhelming. In past years the kids have loved it. They couldn't get to the Easter Bunny fast enough."

(Spak says that many big kids want to be the Easter Bunny. Some even asking a year in advance for the privilege. But don't tell the kids it's actually a human being inside.)

In addition to the aforementioned businesses, Spak thanked the following for making the Easter Egg Hunt possible: Elks members, Slumberland, Blackburn and Stevens, Shurco, First Dakota National Bank, Larry's Heating and Cooling, First National Bank, Walgreens and Walmart. She also lauded the Summit Center for use of the fields and the Assembly of God Church for use of the sound equipment.

Any businesses or individuals that would like to make a contribution or have a question should contact Spak at 660-6414 or contact the Elks at 665-3333

Yankton parks and recreation director Todd Larson said it's an honor to name the stadium after Tereshinski.

"Bob has a history of being in Yankton, coaching at Yankton College, coaching at Mount Marty and then getting into an administration role at Mount Marty," Larson said. "(He's) been influential in the community. I think there's a lot of alumni ... that have stepped forward because of Bob and the relationships he built. Because of the relationships he built, we're able to have this beautiful stadium."

Tereshinski himself was on hand for the proceedings, and said the field is a testament to the many officials and players that have made it possible over the years.

"It's really a tribute to Tom Stotz and Jeff Benjamin and all the people that worked with them over the years," Tereshinski said. "All the volunteers they had — and everybody did some piece of work on this field — it's a tribute to all those people that did that, along with the city, Mount Marty College and Andy Bernatow and what he's done for the baseball program at Mount Marty ... and all the amateur players that played in this park before this and all the Legion players."

He added that while it's a little unorthodox for someone like him to have a field named after him, he still welcomes the recognition.

"They usually name fields after people after they're gone I don't know how to take this because they've named this one while I'm still here," he said. "It's a great feeling and it really makes me happy to be a part of the community and what we have as far as a ballpark is concerned."

Interim MMC president Dr. Thomas Lorang said there was a lot of significance in the signing.

"This is a fantastic day for Mount Marty College to honor Bob Tereshinski after everything he's done for Mount Mary College and for baseball in the community of Yankton," Lorang said. "And then the partnership Mount Marty College has with the Baseball Association and with the City of Yankton is significant."

Tereshinski said he wished he could've coached on the field in its current condition though.

"I could've won, probably, another 50 games in my career if I had a field like this," he said.
