ELMHURST, Ill. — University of South Dakota junior first baseman Yvon Minogue was named co-Player of the Week by the Summit League on Monday.
Minogue gathers her first career award after leading South Dakota to a series win over IUPUI over the weekend. The junior hit .417 (5-for-12) and slugged .667 in the three-game series. In the Saturday nightcap, Minogue was 3-for-5 with a home run, two RBIs and two runs scored. She is batting .429 so far this season, which is fourth-best in The Summit League.

Siouxland Golf Tournament Tour

The Siouxland Junior Golf Tour will again be conducting tournaments in the Tri State area. Last year's inaugural season included nine events throughout Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota with boys and girls from ages 6 to 18 from all three states.
Eleven tournaments are planned this summer again in all three states. It is not necessary to play in all events, and points are awarded based on place in the field with the top six event scores counting for the championship.
For more information on Tournament dates, locations and to register for the Siouxland Junior Golf Tour visit www.sljgt.org or contact Jeff Kuhn at 712-276-3678.

Source: Mullin To Replace Lavin At St. John's

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Mullin, St. John's all-time leading scorer and still the face of its basketball program three decades after his career ended, has agreed to coach the Red Storm, a person with knowledge of the discussions told The Associated Press on Monday.
The person spoke on condition of anonymity because there was no formal announcement.
Mullin, who led St. John's to the Final Four in 1985, has never coached at any level. He replaces Steve Lavin who agreed to leave last week, after five seasons during which the Red Storm reached the NCAA Tournament twice.
Mullin, a New York native, was a five-time All-Star with Golden State.

Dayton (28-7) couldn't get within seven of the way thanks in a big part to Mosqueda-Lewis, who finished the game with seven 3-pointers.

"It eases my mind a lot," Mosqueda-Lewis said of getting the record. "Now I only have one thing to worry about — a national championship."

The Huskies also turned up their defensive pressure. The Flyers shot 51 percent (18-for-35) in the first half, but could only manage to hit 37 percent in the second half.

Breanna Stewart added 23 points and 16 rebounds while Morgan Tuck had 23 points for the Huskies (36-1). Stewart was selected as the Most Outstanding Player of the region.

UConn will play either Tennessee or Maryland in the national semifinals Sunday night.

Auriemma was concerned before the game about Dayton's wide-open style which features multiple players on the court who can hit 3s.
The Flyers went shot for shot with the Huskies for the first 20 minutes with neither team able to get more than a five-point lead.
Dayton made its first four 3-pointers and hit seven of the first 10 shots from behind the arc to put the pressure on the Huskies. UConn got a little breathing room going up 43-38 with just over 3 minutes left in the half and looked poised to take control.
But the Flyers didn't wilt. They scored the final six points before break to go into the locker room up 44-43. That brought the strong contingent of Dayton fans to their feet as they serenaded their team with a loud ovation as they ran into the locker room.

"Really proud of our guys, we competed, weren't intimidated," Dayton coach Jim Jabir said. "They are the best team in the country, bar none. ... For a long time we hung around and hung around. I couldn't be more proud, this was a great day."
This was the first time since the Big East final in 2013 that the Huskies trailed at the half. They weren't rattled.
The loss ended the seventh-seeded Flyers' improbable run. They reached the regional final for the first time in school history after beating Kentucky in the second round and Louisville in the Sweet 16.
Ally Malott scored 14 points, all in the first half, to lead Dayton.

great first impression on Joe. It demonstrated clearly to everybody that he is really close to not just being in the big leagues but an important role on the team."
Chicago is seeking its first World Series title since 1908.
"I'm not going to sit here and tell you that you wouldn't like to have him in your lineup," Maddon said. "He's also 23. I'm looking forward to working with this guy for the next 15 years. He's a brilliant talent. I'm not going to sit here and say things that are disingenuous. This guy is good. He's going to be really good."
Baez, 22, was competing for the starting second-base job. He entered Monday's game against San Francisco hitting .173 with 20 strikeouts in 52 at-bats.
"He is so close to getting it figured out in the batter's box and we feel like Triple-A is the right venue for him to continue making those adjustments and get locked in," Epstein said. "He does everything else so well on the baseball field, he is a winning baseball player. He just has to take that same mindset in the batter's box."

to Triple-A, and it is always the presumptive move for us with young players who haven't played in the big leagues yet. You see how camp develops and how the roster shapes up to see if there is grounds for an exception to the rule."
Bryant was not available to discuss the move. His agent, Scott Boras, called it "Ersatz Baseball."
"MLB is not the MLB with-out the best players," Boras said in a text message to The Associated Press. "Kris excelled at every level and earned the right of entry. The CBA is at the apogee of wrongs incentivizing clubs to create a product less than best. Bryant's situation is the badge for change to the CBA player service structure."
Preparing for its first season under manager Joe Maddon, the Cubs also optioned second baseman Javy Baez to Triple-A Iowa and reassigned shortstop Addison Russell were assigned to minor league camp.
The demotion of Bryant was expected.
"In this case it was the right thing to do," Epstein said. "His performance really mattered, and he made a contingent of Dayton fans to their feet as they serenaded their team with a loud ovation as they ran into the locker room.

"Really proud of our guys, we competed, weren't intimidated," Dayton coach Jim Jabir said. "They are the best team in the country, bar none. ... For a long time we hung around and hung around. I couldn't be more proud, this was a great day."

Ally Malott scored 14 points, all in the first half, to lead Dayton.

Baez was originally in the lineup against the Giants at Sloan Park on Monday but was replaced by Jonathan Herrera as second base and No. 9 in the lineup shortly before first pitch.
One of things Maddon has praised Baez for is how he has stayed focused defensively and on the base paths despite the struggles with the bat.
"Whatever happens at the plate happens," Baez said Monday morning before learning his fate. "I don't take whatever happens at the plate to my defense because I have to play good defense for my pitcher and my whole team."
Russell, 21, was acquired from Oakland in the Jeff Samardzija trade on July 5. He hit .324 in 37 at-bats during spring training.
"I couldn't tell him what to work on," Maddon said. "He is that accomplished at that age. I asked to him keep doing what he is doing."
Epstein and Maddon both said there were heated debates on the decisions when it came to Baez and Bryant.

A Year Later Than Expected, Michigan State Back In Final Four

DETROIT (AP) — Michigan State's run to the Final Four came one season later than expected, and that's part of the reason coach Tom Izzo is enjoying it so much.
"Last year we were picked by the president and everyone else, and we didn't get out of the Elite Eight," Izzo said Monday. "It doesn't matter who picks us and who doesn't, I just appreciate the respect our program has gotten. Being where we are this year, I think we're still respected, and that's all that matters to me."
Since taking over the Michigan State program in 1995, Izzo had never gone more than three seasons without a Final Four appearance until his 2014 team fell a game short. The Spartans lost three key players from last year — first-round draft picks Gary Harris and Adreian Payne, as well as point guard Keith Appling — but the holdovers took that disappointment to heart. Now, this largely unheralded group is back on college basketball's biggest stage, the obvious underdog at a Final Four that includes unbeaten Kentucky and two other No. 1 seeds.
"We got here the hard way," Izzo said. "We earned our way here."
Although the Spartans were a No. 4 seed last season, they were a chic pick to win it all after overcoming injury problems and rolling through the Big Ten Tournament. Even President Barack Obama penciled the Spartans in for the national title, but a loss to seventh-seeded Connecticut in the regional finals ended that pursuit.
The 2014 Spartans were supposed to be one of Izzo's better teams, but even the coach they call "Tournament Tom" endures a postseason setback every now and then. After the loss to UConn, expectations were tempered for this season, and as Michigan State struggled a bit in January and early February, the Spartans looked like a probable NCAA Tournament team, but not much more.

"There came a point in the year where it was just us, just the people in our locker room and our program," guard Travis Trice said. "I'm just more happy for us as a whole. We stuck together. We could have quit. We could have rolled over and died, but we didn't. We just kept fighting."
There were a few signs all along that this team had potential.
Michigan State lost tight games to Kansas, Notre Dame and Maryland, an indication that the Spartans could play on the same level as those teams. After a loss at home to Illinois on Feb. 7, the Spartans went on the road and beat Northwestern by 24, and Izzo began to notice some encouraging signs.
"We went on the road to Northwestern. We had Ohio State, at Michigan, at Illinois. We won all four of those games," Izzo said. "We gained a little confidence. We gained a little toughness during that stretch. I thought that turned us a little bit."
The Spartans won six of their last eight games in the regular season, and then reached the Big Ten title game, where they nearly upset Wisconsin before falling in overtime.

Michigan State seemed to be headed in the right direction, and after the seventh-seeded Spartans upset second-seeded Virginia in the NCAA Tournament, they became legitimate Final Four contenders.
"Tom is as good as there is. Not just a coach, but he's a great guy," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "Nothing surprises me that he and his program would do. They don't have a team, they have a program. As he develops each team, I don't know what the timeframe of it is until that group understands what the program is about, whether it be offense, defense or just character-wise, but they're going to keep improving."
Now Izzo and Krzyzewski will face each other in Saturday night's national semifinals. It's a rematch of a game Duke won 81-71 back in November, but that's part of a regular season that now seems like ancient history for the Spartans.
"Probably back around the beginning or early in February is when I said, 'This team has a chance to make a run.' Did I think it would be this deep a run? No, I can't say I did," Izzo said. "But I'm very proud. That's what makes me prouder of them. They even surprised me a little bit."
