age-appropriate." The respite care benefits not only the caregiver but also the service member, Jenny said.

"Corey and I are with each other for 24 hours a day, so it's also a break for him," she said. "They have a guy that, for his age, is trained to come in and hang out with Corey while I do things like go to the grocery store."

Rep. Stephanie Herseht Sandlin (D-S.D.) held a veterans town hall meeting last week on implementation of the bill. The Briests attended the meeting in Sioux Falls.

As a member of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, Rep. Herseht Sandlin authored key provisions of this legislation that improve health care for women veterans.

In addition, this legislation supports veteran caregivers and enhances services for rural and homeless veterans. The bill will provide important improvements to the health care available to South Dakota veterans.

"It's very gratifying to have the bill signed into law, but there is a lot of hard work that still lies ahead with the implementation of this bill," Herseht Sandlin said.

The Veterans Affairs (VA) is responsible for implementing the program, covered by discretionary dollars, the congresswoman said. The bill calls for an estimated $4 billion over a 5-year program, with the caregiver portion of the bill accounting for $1.5 billion of that amount, she said.

Jenny Briest said she lobbied Congress for funding of the program.

"I have been out to Washington, D.C., a couple of times with the Wounded Warriors program. They had a big caregiver summit last summer, and we went around and talked to Senate and House members," she said.

"One of our concerns (with funding) was the national recession and the federal deficit. But the more we talked to congressional members and their staffs, we saw they were on board." Herseht Sandlin said she has found it rewarding to meet Jenny Briest and other family members caring for injured veterans.

"Jenny is living through the challenges of caring for the seriously wounded military. She and Corey have been wonderful in sharing their experiences and the lessons learned," the congresswoman said.

"Other families are facing some of the same challenges and finding themselves in need of the support provisions. It became a network of people across the country who felt strongly that this bill become law. It allows the veteran to be able to say in his or her home."

The VA Secretary is required to submit a report advising on the extension of the more comprehensive support program for caregivers of OEF/OIF veterans to caregivers of veterans of other eras, no later than two years after implementing the program.

The Briests' situation has provided insight into a number of other service-related issues, such as policy changes for veterans medical care, Herseht Sandlin said. In addition, she has sought funding for TBI research at the University of South Dakota in Vermillion.

Herseht Sandlin said she has learned a great deal not only from the Briests but also from other Charlie Battery members. "Corey and Jenny have such extended family within the National Guard," she said. "There is local support not just for the Briest family but for those who have lost loved ones during deployment."

The Briests have provided a powerful example that has led to passage of the recent federal veterans-caregivers bill and other military needs, Herseht Sandlin said.

"Corey and Jenny show courage every step of the way," the congresswoman said. "They are personal heroes of mine for a variety of reasons."
